

MINISTER HELD ON STORY TOLD BY YOUNG GIRL

Rev. Crawford Jackson Accused by Stenographer and Bound Over in Justice of Peace Court.

ADmits KISSING GIRL
AND OFFERING DRINK

Declares He Wanted Her to Take Drink in Order to Cure Headache—Girl Goes on Stand.

Accused of making improper advances by Miss Louvenia Durden, his 15-year-old stenographer, Rev. Crawford Jackson, secretary of the Juvenile Protective association, and well known in every section of Georgia, was bound over by Justice of the Peace H. H. Girardeau late yesterday afternoon. His bond was assessed at $1,000, and this sum was furnished shortly after 10 o'clock last night.

His accuser, the daughter of Dawson Durden, a detention officer who lives at 412 Central avenue, told in court a story of alleged advances she charged the minister with making while she was in his employ in his office in the Third national bank building, during the absence of her sister, his regular stenographer, who is now on a vacation.

Said Minister Embraced Her.

One of her charges was that Rev. Mr. Jackson had kissed and embraced her and had offered her intoxicants which he himself had been drinking. The minister admitted having kissed the girl and having offered her drink, explaining that his attitude towards her was that of a father and that he proposed that she should drink in order to cure a headache from which she suffered.

This was on Thursday afternoon of last week, after which she is said not to have returned to Rev. Jackson's office.

The accused minister was taken into custody Saturday afternoon upon the issuance of a warrant from Judge Girardeau's court. He accompanied an attaché of the justice court to the courtroom, where the trial proceeded at once. The stenographer of the girl present in court were her father, Dawson Durden, a detention officer, and her brother-in-law, Clyde Scarborough.

Warrant is Issued.

The warrant was secured by the girl's father at the instigation of Scarborough, who was among the first to learn the girl's story. Prior to the arrest, Scarborough visited Rev. Mr. Jackson's office after the receipt of the alleged threat, and upon talking with the minister, gained the same admission which the divine made during the trial.

Scarborough stated on the stand that on Thursday afternoon the day the advances are said to have been made, he came into a room at the Durden home, at which he and his wife are living, and overheard the girl telling her story to Mrs. Scarborough's sister. She feared telling her father the Scarboroughs, she added.

Scarborough informed her father, with Saturday's trial as a result. The girl admitted the story, probably the father that she was afraid he would do the minister physical harm if she told him. The Durden and Rev. Mr. Jackson were friends of long standing, the latter having been connected with the Durden family frequently.

Wife is Rev. Minister's Stenographer.

His wife, Mrs. Louvenia Durden, stenographer, was out of the city on her vacation. Louvenia Durden, who lives in her place, had been in the office only a few days, she stated, before the alleged advances were made.

A Fatherly Feeling.

During the course of his statement the minister declared that he had kissed his accuser while boarding at the home of her parents, and had had her under his arm, and had called her "sweetheart" and "dear".

He said the fatherly feeling he held toward his children, he said, inspired his attitude toward the child.

"I have clasped her to my bosom in the presence of her family," he said.

You Can't Get Something for Nothing

Two men met on Peachtree. "What are you doing these days?" asked number one. "Looking for a job. Guess I'll have to advertise," replied number two.

"Good chance to advertise right now. I see one of the papers is printing want ads free, and another is giving away automobiles."

"Yes, but I don't put much stock in this. The Constitution means something or people wouldn't pay to have them printed. I want a good job, and I'm going to advertise where men like to see my ad."

"Sounds reasonable, doesn't it?"

TIME TO END HIS MISERLY DEBAUCH!

FATHER—DEAR FATHER—COME HOME TO US NOW— THE CLOCK IN THE TOWER STRIKES—32 DAYS

ALL IN READINESS FOR FRANK'S TRIAL MONDAY MORNING

Greatest Legal Battle in the History of Dixie Is the Prediction of Atlanta Attorneys.

ATTORNEYS FOR STATE HOLD FINAL CONFERENCE

Representatives of Leo Frank Still Non-Committal About Report That Postponement May Be Asked.

Practically every detail for the trial of Leo M. Frank has now been completed and with the state declaring its readiness and determination to go to trial and the defense maintaining its same silence in regard to the much mooted matter of postponement, every thing awaits the calling of the case at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the criminal branch of superior court before Judge L. S. Ross.

In far more than one way the trial of the young factory superintendent for the murder on April 26 of Mary Phagan, predict that it will exceed any criminal trial in the south. Extensive preparations have been made since Frank was bound over by the coroner's jury on May 3, and since then the lines of the two armies which will fight the legal battle to determine his fate have been gradually thrown out and maneuvering has been going on for advantageous points.

Greatest Legal Battle.

When the clash actually comes in the court room Atlanta attorneys fear to predict that the greatest legal battle of southern history will be seen.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey held a final conference Saturday afternoon with those who have been aiding him. Assistant Solicitor E. A. Stephens and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, who will aid in the legal fight, were present, and also Detective Pat Campbell and John N. Starnes, who have been practically attached to the solicitor's office during the preparation.

The solicitor announced that he had made every preparation, and would take a good rest today in order to be in physical readiness for the severe strain of the week.

"Go home and sleep well tonight and go to court tomorrow," and pray that the state will win.

DEFENDING MOTHER, BOY SHOTS COUSIN

Athens Lad Says He Shot to Save Mother From Attack.

Athens, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—Roy Gunnels, aged 15, shot and mortally wounded his cousin, Sam Culverson, aged 15, tonight at the Culverson home. Gunnels gave himself up to the police at once, and declared that Culverson had come to his home in a state of intoxication and had attacked his mother, Mrs. L. L. Gunnels.

Culverson had come to his home with a bullet wound in his abdomen, and physicians who examined him declared that he would probably live but a few hours. Gunnels was placed under arrest to await the outcome of the wound he made upon the lad.

WHITE MAN BEHEADED BY OKLAHOMA NEGROES

Paul Valley, Okla., July 26.—Officers and citizens are combing the country in the vicinity of Muskogee, Okla., where four negroes killed a white man in an atrocious manner Friday night. The victim was A. G. Arlington, who was selling watermelons at a negro place. He became involved in a dispute with four of his customers regarding payment for a melon. They threatened him and he ran. After pursuing him for a quarter of a mile, Arlington was caught, three of the negroes held him while the fourth drew a razor and threw his head from his body. They threw the body to one side of the road and fled.

NAME OF THE NEGRO MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Reported President Didn't Know He Was Nominating Negro for Treasury Register.

Washington, July 26.—(Special).—So emphatic have been the protests from southern congressmen against the president's nomination of Adam E. Patterson, of Muskogee, Okla., for register of the treasury, that the nomination will probably be withdrawn.

There are a number of white employees—men and women—in the office of the register of the treasury, and democrats have been eager that after sixteen years of waiting a white man should be appointed to this place. But while white women will not be forced to work under the direction of a negro.

Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, who immediately took up the fight against Patterson's nomination, stated this afternoon that he understood the nomination was sent in by inadvertence, the president not knowing that the man was a negro. He predicted that the nomination would be withdrawn.

Patterson is a negro lawyer of Muskogee, Okla. He was endorsed by Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, and was reported to have had the support of Senator Shafter, of Colorado. He made a number of speeches for the democratic ticket in the last campaign. Senator Owen, who lives in Muskogee, did not endorse Patterson, and declines to comment upon the nomination.

Blazing Bull Puts Fear of Hereafter Into Campmeeting

As Parson Preaches on Torment, Fiery Prodigy Appears and the Worshipers Scatter.

Millwood, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—Soon after 11:30 a.m., a prominent farmer of this vicinity, had built a fire in his pen to bring the cows home the other day, a big bull strode in. The animal had been rubbing against the far face of a turnip tree and his head was covered with tar. When the bull saw the fire in the pen he took to the bolting and kicking, but the flames set on an east side rowdy abouts out the lights. However, when the bull commenced to butt the fire his coat of tar caught fire and he dashed out of the pen while the smoke and flame poured from his head.

Now a dark camp meeting was going on in the vicinity and the eloquent brother of the platform was preaching upon the subject of torment and the fire and brimstone that was sure to be the lot of his auditors if they did not mend their ways. It happened that just as he was telling this, he and behold, through the trees could be seen a roll of smoke which fire thundering toward them with incredible swiftness. The colored apostles didn't await further details, but scattered like a swarm of bees in a sudden hailstorm.

BURNS VESTMENTS AND PRAYER BOOK AND QUITS CHURCH

Rev. Chas. S. Davidson, Formerly of Atlanta, Renounces Priesthood in Sensational Manner at Charlottesville.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH BITTERLY ATTACKED

Minister Says He is Leaving Church to Assert a Spiritual Democracy Against a Religious Aristocracy.

Charlottesville, Va., July 26.—(Special).—At the gates of historic Monticello yesterday evening the Rev. Charles Steele Davidson, former pastor of St. Mark's, Cleveland, Ohio; Holy Apostles, Brooklyn; Epiphany, Atlanta, and assistant rector of Christ church, this city, severed his connection with the Episcopal church by burning his vestments and prayer book.

Later in a written statement he emphatically criticized the workings of the church which he has served for many years.

THE ATTACKS THE CHURCH.

The statement reads: "I charge that the Episcopal church is the gentleman's church in general and in Virginia, in particular. It is powerfully financially and socially, spiritually and intellectually and is a powerful force in the life of the people. It is a force for the poor and the cultured and has no vital interest in the poor and the common. She either suppresses the poor or she neglects them. In Virginia, the Episcopal church is a mere relic of the old social feudalism and stands for a dry rotting conservatism that hinders the progress of the kingdom. Virginia, after her long depression, is aroused and is marching on, but the church is slowly retreating to the citadel of tradition and materialism. It is taking up the matter of physical cleanliness and is leaving the inner man. It is wasting time on eugenics and putting its trust in the physical. It is contending with the rustlings about the spirituality of worship when it has lost the spirit of worship."

"That Through With Materialism."

"The Episcopal church everywhere."

WHILE FLEEING U. S. OFFICIAL IS SHOT DOWN BY MEXICANS

Immigration Inspector Chas. Dixon Probably Fatally Wounded by a Squad of Huerta's Soldiers While on Business Trip to Juarez.

AMERICAN WAS FORCED TO RUN THE GAUNTLET BY HUERTA'S SOLDIERS

Other American Officials Crossed to Juarez to Get Dixon, But the Wounded Man Is Held by Soldiers. Secretary Bryan Says "It Looks Like a Serious Case."

"CASE LOOKS SERIOUS."

SAYS SECRETARY BRYAN

Washington, July 26.—"It looks like a serious case. We will do whatever is necessary," said Secretary Bryan tonight, when told of the shooting of Immigration Inspector Dixon by Mexican soldiers. President Wilson was also advised of the shooting, but made no comment.

El Paso, Texas, July 26.—After arguing all afternoon with Colonel J. N. Vaquero of the Mexican federal army in Juarez, F. W. Berkham, supervising inspector of the United States immigration service, Clarence G. Gately, inspector; Dr. J. H. Tappan, surgeon, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards were unable to secure permission from the federals for the removal to an El Paso hospital of Charles S. Dixon, immigration commissioner, who was shot, perhaps fatally, this afternoon by a squad of federal soldiers in the southern part of Juarez.

The federal authorities refused to allow the wounded American to be removed from the military hospital where he was taken. Federal soldiers guard the ward where Dixon lies, refusing admission to every one except Dr. Tappan. A Japanese male nurse is attending to him. Dr. Tappan stated that Dixon is resting easily and has no fever.

Struck By Bullets.

One bullet struck just above Dixon's right hip and emerged at the front of his abdomen. Another struck his right foot.

The judge, who is hearing the case, has taken the evidence of the complaining witnesses, he says, and tonight will order the release of the soldiers and says he feared execution by running down an ally.

The arrest of Dixon, the immigration commissioner, was the result of a "frame-up" by a negro, Arthur Walker, and certain soldiers stationed at Juarez, claiming that Walker had secured a warrant in advance of the appearance of Dixon to investigate a white slavery case today.

100,000 WOMEN CRY FOR RIGHT TO VOTE

The Non-Militant Suffragettes Make Monster Demonstration in London—Every Constituency Represented.

London, July 26.—The long pilgrimage to London of non-militant women suffragettes culminated this morning in a monster gathering at Hyde Park attended by fully 100,000 women. Headed by banners bearing the motto "Reason, Not Force," which is the motto of the National Union of Women's Suffragette Societies, the petitioned battalions with hands playing and banners flying, swept through the four principal squares of the park and converged at a central point where 10 speakers addressed them from 20 platforms.

At the sound of a bugle a resolution was simultaneously adopted amid waves of tumultuous applause, being proclaimed without further delay to give women the franchise.

Drew Enormous Crowd. The vast concourse of women has been believed to constitute a record in any political gathering. It furnished a picturesque and impressive spectacle and drew an enormous crowd of sightseers.

Among the speakers was Mrs. Charles Chapman, wife of the late Sir Charles Chapman, who was believed to constitute a record in any political gathering. It furnished a picturesque and impressive spectacle and drew an enormous crowd of sightseers.

Every constituency of the country was represented. The small detachments of suffragettes who originally started from Lands End and John-River—the two uttermost limits of the island—were augmented on the way until they formed great columns.

The women started out on June 18. They were carried in motor cars, and many of the country's leading professors and business men speaking at their meetings.

At Bedford the first lady of the county made a speech to the women, and at the end of the day a speaker who was addressing a hostile audience.

On Saturday morning the women marched through the city.

JACKSON AND EAGAN CITE CONVICT'S DEATH

As Evidence of the Fact That the Present System of Control Is Wrong.

Marion Jackson and J. J. Eagan, in behalf of the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, make the following statement in reference to the death of Charles Stevens, a convict-referred to by no name being mentioned, in their recently published bulletin No. 65.

Editor Constitution: Bulletin No. 65. In fourteen months five convicts have been reported to have died as the result of heat in Fulton county. Four of these, when hot drunk too much use water according to the authorities.

And there are those who say, they were beaten the night before by the last Charles Stevens, Dr. McDonald says.

His death was caused by sunstroke and there were no marks or signs upon his body of any ill treatment. His skin was neither dried nor broken, but the cold clamminess of his body, proved him dead.

You see the poor man thought, "What I will escape its cutting bite." It will wound.

They died. And there were no marks or signs upon his body of any ill treatment. His skin was neither dried nor broken, but the cold clamminess of his body, proved him dead.

We ask those of us in authority to remedy it in the name of Him, Whom "Visage was an married more than any man."

We are confident of your sympathy in the MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT.

The latter two had hold of the chains at the time and were severely shocked. Mrs. Stegers received a shock also which made her body rigid for a few minutes.

An Attempt at Jail Delivery in Spaulding Fails.

How Detectives Trailed Clues in Phagan Murder Case

By BRITT CRAIG.

Anybody but a detective would have given up his job if the boss had ordered him to catch the murderer of Mary Phagan. Nobody but a detective would have undertaken such a task with a conscientious view of ultimately carrying out the order.

There are two things absolutely necessary to the success of a criminal investigator—patience and persistence. Without both, the detective ceases to be a detective and becomes a hunchman. Then, too, there is something else that is just as essential. It is labor, undiluted, labor, the kind that reeks the ditch-digger's forehead with sweat and wrinkles the brow of the clerk.

If you were to ask the successful detective to find a needle in some particular haystack, he'd take the job. First, he'd ask if the needle was really there. Convinced that it was, he'd convince you it could be found, and forthwith set about to find it.

He'd go at it logically, of course, like all good detectives go at the elusive needle would be by sorting out every straw in the stack—examining them one by one until he had inspected every single straw or had found the needle. If it failed to be found, he wouldn't go by another needle and say "Here's the one that was in the haystack," he'd say it couldn't be found.

And, very likely, it couldn't be. There are no such things as Sherlock Holmeses or Nick Carters—that is, outside fiction and the stage. The average detective is only a plain, ordinary individual, with common horse sense, an insight into human nature and a liberal appetite for hard work. For instance, John Starnes, Solicitor Dorsey's right-hand man, used to work around the car barn, and John Black, for whom Harry Scott could not have done without, once was a cooper in a brewery.

Detectives Minus Disguises.

There is no air of mystery about them, and nothing that smacks of occult science. If you didn't know them and met them on the street, you'd suspect they were just everyday business men on the way home or to work, with no other missions in life than the maintenance of a happy home and the keeping of a respectable job. They don't wear false whiskers and smoke pipes and inspect you with an uncanny eye. They're merely ordinary folks, with ordinary thoughts and talents.

No undertaking has been more stupendous than the assignment to catch Mary Phagan's slayer, which Chief Lanford gave to his men that tragic Sunday morning. Nothing appeared more difficult, more baffling. It was as though instructions had been given to find out who built the Sphinx or dug Mammoth cave.

There was nothing on which to work except the two lone clues—the murder notes and the fact that the body had been found in the National Pencil factory. More desolate prospects have never been faced by police headquarters. The chief's men set out on the case like starting for the rainbow's end—which is at it but incongruous comparison.

But it is the job of a detective to find anything that's feasible. Mary Phagan had been murdered by somebody. That somebody was somewhere. He could be found some way or other, and it happened to be up to headquarters to find him. The public arose in a unit and said so, and being as the public was headquarters' bread and butter and boss, they had to do it. Therefore, when the chief called John Starnes, Bass Rosser, Bill Harper, John Black and Pat Campbell into consultation that morning and said, "Boys, get out and get that man, whoever he is," the quietest answered in chorus, "All right, chief. Which meant a whole lot more than it sounds.

Public Clamor for Action.

They began on a case that was as empty as a dream. An impatient public clamored for vengeance. As public are prone to act, it yelled and howled for the murderer, insisting that the detectives go right out and round him up, as though man-killers were to be brought in like cows being brought from the pasture.

It meant work, work, work—worlds of work without cease. It meant persistence and patience and endurance. A detective must have stamina as well as anything else, and plenty of it. He has to have it. It is absolutely necessary. His determination is a kind that spurs him on with assurance that if he works long and hard enough he eventually will "bring home the bacon."

When the newspapers spread word of the tragedy to every inch of ground that represents Atlanta, and its horror began to ferment in the public mind, clues seemed to spring up from everywhere. They came to headquarters by telephone and messenger. They floated down in every conceivable way, deluging the place with more clues than the place knew what to do with.

A hundred persons had seen Mary Phagan just before her death. A hundred more had seen her that night. Everybody seemed to know something or other about Mary and her death. Word came that she had been seen in all parts of the city, when, in truth, her body had lain cold and rigid in the basement blackness. Thousands had stories to tell, suggestions to make, theories to advance. Atlanta in general, it seemed, was selfishly desirous of having something to do with the Phagan case and of helping the detectives find her murderer.

It served to handicap the detectives the more.

Sorting Out the Clues.

Every available clue was run down with infinite thoroughness. The sequel was found to every story. Plausible theories received as much attention as the murder itself. Nothing was overlooked. Thousands of miles were covered within the city limits. The truth was learned of every tale that reached headquarters, matters how inconsequential it proved to be. Detectives worked night and day, and slept only when they had to.

Each man seemed to feel a personal responsibility for the murder. He felt it; his individual duty to bring her slayer to bay. It is one of the instincts of the police detective—by that, the good ones are meant. A bad detective is a cancer in a department.

The finding of the slayer didn't mean so much science or magic as it meant labor and thoroughness. It was a plow-mule kind of labor, and thoroughness the kind the government overlooks of its servants. There was no "laying down," no quitting the job, no letting so this or that merely because it looked easy or unnecessary.

For days and days that seemed endless, the detective department floundered in a bewildering sea of countless clues that sprang up as though at the word of a genie. Every single one needed proportionate attention. In their raw state, one was prospective of meaning as much as another. Ferreting Phagan clues was similar to following a strange woodland path. Nothing was known of the end until the end was reached.

It required walking from one end of town to the other, hunting folks and questioning them, shadowing them and finding them. It required every thing that constitutes work—rapid work—and the man who aptly said the detective bureau assembled a collection of truck-horses didn't miss it far, at that, although he didn't mean it that way.

Two Men—Which?

Finally matters assumed manageable shape. Things began to look clearer, more comprehensible, and clues began to diminish with time. It became possible to wipe away the moss and angle-growth and get a straight hold on the case. Affairs moulded themselves into definite form, and, as a result of purely patience, persistence and truck-horse labor, have narrowed themselves down to two men—Leo Frank and Jim Conley.

The one the confessed—the other the accused.

Which is graphically reminded of that biblical passage pertaining to the sweat of the brow earning the bread. Of all the men who worked in the Phagan investigation, Harry Scott, field manager of the Pinkertons, was undoubtedly the most successful. It was he who engineered the third degree which exacted the confession from Conley. He was retained by the accused, Frank, on the Monday following the murder's discovery. A few hours later Frank himself was arrested.

Scott operated in cooperation with the police department through John Black. He assisted in the third degree under which the factory superintendent was placed, and supervised much of the work created at police headquarters.

Scott has been a criminal investigator for seven years, during all of which time he has been associated with the Pinkertons. He entered the profession upon leaving college. He is a native of Pennsylvania, and in Philadelphia was assistant superintendent of assistant superintendent. Two years ago he was transferred to Atlanta, where his position is virtually that of assistant superintendent. He is only 27 years old, and is married. Greater credit, perhaps, has been accredited him in the Phagan case than any other operative.

Headquarters' Star Man. The reputation of John Black, the headquarters man who was associated with Scott, is too well and widely known to need comment. He is headquarters' scar investigator, although his detective experience dates back only four years. He was promoted from the rank of patrolman after having been in the department two years.

He is 30 years old, and is the father of a family. Prior to joining the police force he was a cooper in employ of the Atlanta Brewing and Ice company. He was a partner of George Bullard in the solving of the famous David Hillis murders which sent two to the scaffold, and was associated with Bullard and Scott in ferreting the Glesby diamond robbery, for which three were convicted.

Black also cooperated with Scott in obtaining the Conley confession. He was an invaluable aid to the Pinkerton man, and received similar credit for success achieved in the Phagan investigation.

John Starnes and Pat Campbell, who appear as prosecutors of Leo Frank, have been detailed to the case since a few hours after the body had been found. Starnes was summoned at daybreak from his home, and reported for duty at the scene of the discovery. In fact, he was first to begin work on the mystery.

He and Campbell have been associated with the solicitor general following the close of the inquest. The Black, who assisted in the third degree under which the factory superintendent was placed, and supervised much of the work created at police headquarters.

They were completely detached from headquarters, and interviewed probably more witnesses than any other figures in the investigation. It is hinted that the prosecution possesses weighty evidence which has never escaped the solicitor's office. If this be the case, Dorsey has practically admitted that credit should be laid at the door of Starnes and Campbell.

Starnes is suave and polite. He is the most immaculate attaché to Atlanta's detective department, and has the appearance of a moderate business man. Before entering the police department, he was connected with only the city's car barn. His age is 38, although he doesn't look a day over 40.

Eight years ago he was promoted from patrolman to detective duty, after having been on the force less than two years. Campbell is three years younger. He is an ex-school teacher, and has been in the department four years, two of which have been devoted to detective service. S. L. Rosser, the headquarters detective, is the investigator who obtained the famous Montem St. affidavit in which she testified to visits she made to the pencil factory at 12 o'clock on the tragic Saturday finding the office empty at a Frank swears he was sitting at desk.

Rosser is a man of 40, with two years of police experience. He is promoted to the detective bureau years after enlistment. He was merely attached to the Donal camp, in a clerical capacity, to which he had risen from the rank of guard. At present he is the only man working on the case directly from headquarters.

Many "Third Degrees" Worked. Bill Harper, who has gained a valuable reputation as criminal investigator, was a conspicuous figure in many of the third degree practices throughout the Phagan mystery, particularly those to which New Lee the first suspects were subjected. He is a department partner of John B. and is 45 years old. He has been needed with the bureau for six years, having been promoted after four years of police duty.

W. T. Chewning, who, with his partner, J. N. Norris, obtained the sensational Forney affidavit, is the man associated with the investigation who achieved higher uniform than that of patrolman. He is five years as sergeant, after which he was elected to the bureau. He is 43 years old, and, before coming a policeman, was a barbershop. He and Norris were connected in the case, and, at time so much interest was being centered in that particular phase, in command of the squads who arrested Marietta and surrounding vicinity for the "Mysterious Of Road" who was rumored to have to the factory with Mary Phagan. All these men will testify before coming Frank trial, and then you will be able to see for yourselves just they look like—these detectives solved the Phagan case.

ADMINISTRATION AGENTS CRITICIZED BY WILSON

Doesn't Think They Should Have Been Sent to Mexico.
Washington Is Ignorant
About Mexicans, He Says.

Washington, July 26.—President Wilson had before him tonight the report written here today by Ambassador Llewellyn L. Wilson on conditions in Mexico from the time that he had left the reins of Porfirio Diaz through the stirring events of the recent revolution, the downfall of Madero and down to the establishment of the Huerta regime. A report of three years.

This report was transmitted to the president tonight by Secretary Bryan, who had spent the greater part of the day in conference with the ambassador. The president expects to examine the report before Monday when he will confer with Ambassador Wilson on a possible solution of present difficulties.

Bryan Gets Other Information. Secretary Bryan, in affixing the mass of varying information which he had gathered from all parts of Mexico, did not confine himself to official channels, for as soon as Ambassador Wilson left the state department, he had been at the state department of the United States.

Cal, whose identity as an agent of the government has been variously stated and denied in official circles, appeared before the president. He had been at the state department of the United States for nearly an hour after Ambassador Wilson left. Mr. Wilson was dressed with Secretary Bryan and made secret of the conference. Mr. Bryan was silent, despite the fact of seeing the Huerta administration. Mr. Wilson was silent, despite the fact of seeing the Huerta administration.

for the establishment of peace in Mexico. The ambassador was not willing to say what he had written in his report, but declared unequivocally that he had not altered his views about affairs in Mexico since coming to Mexico. He admitted he had at various times suggested the advisability of sending his views about affairs in Mexico to the state department.

Financial Losses Enormous. It was understood the ambassador's report deals extensively with the financial situation in Mexico. It was said on good authority that he pictured a gloomy condition in financial circles in the southern republic, pointing to several big banks as being on the verge of bankruptcy and a general condition of distress in business circles. It is declared the ambassador spoke of the continuous deficits both of the national treasury and of the railway systems and estimated foreign losses as very heavy. The French banks alone he said have lost $250,000,000 in gold within recent months. That American investments had greatly depreciated and that no estimate could be placed on losses in the United States.

how soon he would finish his conference, he said: "I'll certainly hurry them," and then added with a laugh: "I understand from the newspapers that my presence in Washington is costing Mr. Bryan $200 a day by losing his time at the state department, where Secretary Bryan was waiting. President Wilson had gone to the play golf. He will not see the ambassador until Monday."

Secretary Bryan would make no announcement of his conference with the ambassador, further than to say that Mr. Wilson had made a preliminary report.

Charges Minister With Kissing

MINISTER HELD ON STORY TOLD BY GIRL

on the stand, "and I have kissed her affectionately goodbye while her father looked on."

The girl was the first to take the stand. She is a pretty child and looks younger than her age. She was dressed in a simple summer frock and wore wide straw hat.

The first advance was made, she said, on Wednesday preceding the Thursday on which she had fled from Rev. Mr. Jackson's office. Her employer had come to her desk and, placing an arm over her shoulder, had kissed her on the cheek. She said she was unable to control his strange action and resented it, thrusting out an arm to prevent a second kiss. She said the minister attempted to give her a third.

She jumped from her chair, moving away and plainly showed her resentment. She stated that Rev. Jackson endeavored to apologize. She returned to her work, leaving the office at the regular hour, 3 p. m. The following afternoon, about 2:45 o'clock, she stated the minister was drinking.

"He had some stuff in bottles," she said, "that resembled beer. He drank some of it and poured out a glass for me, asking me to drink it. I wouldn't do it and told him so. He said I would do me good and was helpful."

When I would take the drink he came over my chair and put his arm around my shoulder. He kissed me and when I objected, tried to kiss me again. I shoved him aside, got my hat and left his office."

It was between 2:30 and 2 o'clock more than two hours before I took usually left work for home."

Says Minister Admitted Story. Scarborough stated that when he confronted the minister with the story of his sister-in-law Rev. Jackson acknowledged having kissed her, but having put his arm about her shoulder. He declared, however, that he had been no wrong motive in his action.

"I guess I drank a little too much beer," the brother-in-law quoted him as having said.

Rev. Mr. Jackson made this statement on the stand.

"I used to board the Durden home and frequently carried the girls to the moving picture shows. Being fond of children, as I am, I was kind to them all. This child who accuses me I have held to my bosom at her home and in the presence of her father."

"I have called her 'sweetheart' and 'dear' in the hearing of her parents. It is characteristic of me to call children 'my dear' and use endearing terms to them. The day this incident occurred I was in a playful frame of mind. It is customary for me to go through calisthenic exercises with dumb bells. I was showing this girl these exercises and how to breathe deeply."

"I touched her once upon the chest to demonstrate the art of deep breathing, and that was all. Once, while she was coming her hair before the mirror in my office, she told me of a store upon her lips. I saluted it with mentalism. That was all."

Thought it Would Help Her. "I admit drinking a bottle of Bass—only one bottle. I also asked the girl if she would not drink a little, thinking it would help her. My physician advised me to drink Bass for weakness of the heart. She refused to drink, and I did not insist."

"On the day I was fired out from a long trip into the two Carolinas, because of two speeches I had delivered on the previous Sunday. It was a trying trip, and a tax on my system. On several occasions the girl answered me crossly. I could not tolerate it, being nervous and unstrung, and told her to go home. The following day Mr. Scarborough appeared at my office and accused me of making improper advances toward the child. I told him of the fatherly feeling I felt for her and of the source of dejection which had been upon me, a fact proved by my twelve years' association with the fatherly spirit, and we were more in the relation of father and child than any other work for me. Many respects her story is incorrect—some of it is untrue."

The girl was recalled to the stand. Frank L. Haralson, her counsel, asked if the minister had ever kissed her at home or if she had ever sat in his lap. "No," she answered, "I never have. He never even tried to kiss me. His past conduct has been of the best, and I never had him in approach me before in such manner."

She stated, however, that upon visiting his office with her sister he had occasionally called her "sweetheart," and "dear."

Her father was called to the stand, and upon being questioned, stated that he had never seen his daughter kiss the minister or sit in his lap. He declared, though, that Rev. Jackson had often been in a drunken condition at the Durden home, and on many mornings required his breakfast sent to the room.

"The girl often found empty whiskey and beer bottles in her room," Durden said, "some of the windows by Dr. Jackson."

Attorney Haralson, in his speech at the Durden home, denounced the minister. Attorney George P. Whitman, who represented Rev. Jackson, admitted in his speech that his client had committed an indiscretion, but he said, however, that there was no impure motive in his actions or any effort at immorality.

"The entire affair," he said, "was some of it and poured out a glass for me, asking me to drink it. I wouldn't do it and told him so. He said I would do me good and was helpful."

When I would take the drink he came over my chair and put his arm around my shoulder. He kissed me and when I objected, tried to kiss me again. I shoved him aside, got my hat and left his office."

Probe of Moose Initiation To Follow Birmingham Deaths

That the death of two Birmingham men during a Moose initiation last Thursday night will be investigated by the supreme lodge of the order, it was announced in the explanation of the Birmingham lodge, the declaration made by H. L. MacEwen, a well-known Atlanta Moose and director of Atlanta lodge, No. 521.

Mr. MacEwen says that he intends to lay before the session of the supreme lodge, which meets next week in Cincinnati, the circumstances of the tragedy with demand for an investigation.

"There is nothing in the authorized initiation ceremony that could have possibly caused such a result as the death of the candidates by a shock of electricity," said Mr. MacEwen Saturday.

"The ritual of the local order of the Moose is the same as the ritual of the national order, and the candidates and endeavorers to initiate are the same. We do not intend to play on the fear of his imagination, but to make a simple and impressive, being built around our motto, 'Purity, Aid, Progress'."

It is true that the Birmingham lodge has so far violated these principles as to bring violence, electric shocks or horse play into the initiation, it will meet with severe action by a high tribunal of the order. While deaths have not yet been fully explained, it is believed to be likely that the occurred during initiation, and not the 'side degree,' and not the initiation at Cincinnati. The supreme lodge at Cincinnati will not be in session for several of the lodge in Birmingham occurrence will have to be in deciding their final action.

We feel that the entire order has to an extent injured by the false impression created by the death of the men, and for this reason we ask the public to be given to the fact that the order condemns such methods for every purpose of the order. Every man who has gone through ceremony in Atlanta knows that there is no electric shock or horse play of kind of violence practiced. Hence to be dedicated member, the order itself is in splendid command over the country. Among the projects we have under way is the establishment of an industrial home for sons and daughters of local Moose. This institution will be dedicated on Monday, at Mooseheart, Ill. The institution Marshall delivering the dedication address. The technical and academic instruction here will be of a high order, while the children of Moose may be educated free of cost to the individual member.

"This institution will also have a department as a home for aged and infirm members, a general sanitarium and also a tuberculosis sanitarium. It will be an institution of education and refuge built upon lines never before conceived—where the sting of pauperism is unknown—where the child and the old man will be improved, equipping our children for cleaner and better citizenship."

Seasonal Developments Likely. Birmingham, Ala., July 26.—(Special.)—Seasonal developments are promised as a result of the investigation of the violent death of David Kenny and Christopher Gun, who were killed while undergoing the initiation ceremony of the local chapter of the Local Order of Moose, here Thursday night.

Examination of the bodies of the two young men failed to show any defect or cause of death. Physicians who held the autopsy gave the cause of death unknown. The coroner's jury, who began investigation into the deaths of the young men today, announced that the deaths were not yet fully explained. Thursday night would be prosecuted for the death of the two young men. Both underwriters have issued statements denying the order's responsibility for the deaths. The lodge has taken to their establishment, without such delay.

The coroner's jury will be empaneled Monday when developments of the case will be taken up. In a statement tonight said that the lodge would not be allowed to take any action before the coroner's jury. A telegram from Cincinnati tonight summoned John Abbott, director, David Williams, secretary, and B. Vanderham, prelate, of the Birmingham chapter, to the national convention of the order, to be held in Cincinnati Sunday night, when it is expected the lodge will be in session. The order itself is in splendid command over the country. Among the

SOLDIER BOYS LEAVE CAMP AT ST. SIMONS

Two Sham Battles, the Surf and the Girls Featured Stay on the Island.

St. Simons Island, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—At seven o'clock this morning the call to break camp was sounded and every tent fell while the regimental band from Shelburne, Mass., played "The Girl From Dublin." The equipment was quickly prepared for shipment and loaded on the lighters for Brunswick, where the special trains were waiting to carry the different companies to their respective destinations.

The week has been very interesting in camp with a baseball game Sunday afternoon between American and Columbus and a full dress parade Monday afternoon. The duties have been diligently performed, being very liberally interspersed with dancing and surf bathing.

Early Thursday morning the regiment began its hike under the direction of an exceedingly hot sun. The temporary camp was located about five miles from headquarters and the men enjoyed the night of "roughing it."

Each man prepared his meals and slept in the dog tents.

The camp was frequented by two sham battles, one Thursday afternoon, the other Friday morning as the regiments were returning to camp. Every man seems to have enjoyed the ten days at St. Simons as the maneuvers were very instructive and intelligent carried out and the girls and the boys.

The nightly dances at the new St. Simons hotel pavilion were sources of pleasure that were appreciated by large number of soldier boys. Everything considered the encampment this year far surpassed any previous one and it is no doubt the wish of the entire regiment that the same place be chosen for future state encampments.

Kills Negro Cropper. "The Atlanta Journal" (Special.)—Reports have been received here of the killing of a few days ago John Evans, a prominent farmer of Duval county, Evans, who has been a cropper on the Eubanks place, was killed by Mr. Eubanks about not working his crop. The next morning as Mr. Eubanks went out of his lot he met the negro with a shotgun in his hand. Upon asking what he was doing with it he swung around as if to shoot and Mr. Eubanks drew his pistol and shot, killing the negro almost instantly.

THIN FOR YEARS---"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gargol. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gargol, "had to quit work. I was no weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 22 pounds on me in 23 days," states W. D. Roberts. "I had made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 112 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 23 days, I weighed 134 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares Dr. Marshall, and Mr. Meyer adds: "The past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have in twenty years. My weight has increased from 110 to 125 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women, who are concentrated in the Sargol more coming every day—living in every part and corner of the world, voluntarily testify to weight increasing after all the doctors' prescriptions, and the fact that they are 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, is a fact that cannot be denied. Sargol is the only medicine that there must be something in this Sargol. It is not a food, but it is the scales method of flesh building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it. Just at this time, when you are more underweight, it is the only way to know it is to try Sargol. Many think folks say: "I'd like to eat, but I can't. I don't have the extra weight, but when someone says 'Not a chance. Nothing will make it.' You have tried Sargol. You can't and cannot know that this is true."

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "fat" there, flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol. Just take it and watch weight pile on. It is the only medicine that will round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. Phagan Trial Will Be Great Legal Battle

By VERNON STILES.

One of the most spectacular battles in the legal history of Georgia is expected to open up tomorrow morning when the case of the State versus Leo M. Frank for murder is formally begun and the superintendent of the National Pencil factory goes on trial for the murder of little Mary Phagan, an employee whose dead and bruised body was found in the factory basement by police officers late last Sunday morning in April.

Since that Sunday morning when The Constitution's exclusive extra appeared upon the streets, telling the simple story of the crime and of how New Lee, a negro night watchman, had called police headquarters at 2:15 o'clock that morning and informed the officers that he had found a dead body in the basement, Atlanta people and those from many other sections have been talking of almost nothing else.

Every bit of news, from the arrest of Lee, who is yet held, having been bound over, but never indicted by the grand jury, to the arrest of J. M. Gantt and of Arthur Mullinax, of Frank and finally of the negro sweepers, James Conley, has been seized upon with avidity.

The horror of the crime upon the little girl seemed to have impressed itself upon the people at large almost as strongly as it did upon those few who went to the basement that morning and saw the body as it lay there.

Various developments—the freeing of Gantt and Mullinax, the alleged confession of Conley to aiding Frank in disposing of the body, and the various other sensational affidavits which have been made public—have been eagerly seized upon by the public.

Great Legal Battle Over Frank. Leo Frank is the only man at present under indictment for the crime, and while the various sides of the case have developed, some of the shrewdest lawyers in the country have been planning on one side his conviction and death on the gallows, while on the other side, his acquittal as he has industriously planned.

Leo Frank was arrested five days after the crime, and, realizing the seriousness of the charge, he sought legal advice at once. His friends and relatives are persons of wealth and influence and legal talent of the highest order in the state has been employed to defend him from the side as charge.

Luther Z. Rosser was first called and later Herbert Haas, a younger lawyer and one of less experience, and of much legal ability, was selected to aid in the defense. Not satisfied, these men sought out the legal advice of another lawyer who is noted throughout the state for success in criminal cases, and Reuben Arnold joined forces with the defense.

Attorney Rosser, despite his legal reputation, has "hobbies," like any other human. Hobby No. 1, which is "filio man" would, well, with "ape" if he knew the Redoubtable, is a hatred of having his picture taken. He loves a camera like a bull does a red flag.

"Oh, I just hate pictures; never let 'em taken," he told The Constitution reporter who ventured to ask him to pose.

Hobby No. 2 pertains to a hatred of cravats, which nearly every day he wears, and the other is a black case, that is as much a part of Mr. Rosser as is his legal ability and his dogged pertinacity in fighting cases.

The Constitution photographer, however, "snapped" one of Mr. Rosser as he was an "unconscious" and might be mentioned that it was a bad thing for the photographer that Rosser was "unaware" at the time, for a story is going the rounds how he chased out of his office by the case of his a photographer another paper who stuck his head the door and poked the machine at than Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold no man in Georgia are better known for successful criminal practice except possibly John W. Moore, who with his partner, J. A. Branch, recently defended Mrs. Susan Phagan on the charge of shooting her husband, Eugene Greer, and later Mrs. J. A. Appelman, her husband.

Once counsel was employed for a persistent rumor has gone rounds that John Moore was one of Frank's counsel. The rumor has been as persistently denied both by Moore and by the acknowledged counsel and the former has taken no part in the case.

However, it is known to several Mr. Moore was called from his office to that of Mr. Rosser, when Rosser and Arnold were making a statement in which they stated the attitude taken by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in relation to the proposed indictment of the Conley, and it is generally understood that Mr. Moore has a wonderful knowledge of criminal law many points to the defense.

Dorsey heads the state's side on the side of the state, Solicitor General is the principal counsel and worked on the case from the time that Leo Frank and Sweet Lee were bound over by the coroner's jury as a superior court. Mr. Dorsey has a world of experience in criminal cases and before that time had an enviable reputation for himself.

He aided him in gathering together evidence desired for the mass trial, and presenting it to the jury, he has two men to assist him, E. J. Conley and E. J. Conley, who has worked with him in the past, and Attorney Frank A. Dorsey, a man who holds as high a station as any in Georgia in the legal profession.

Case will be called tomorrow morning and at that time the motion of its postponement will be up. During the past week much has been said of the possibility of postponement. Solicitor has been vigorously that he wished to begin on the date set. At days for Frank have made no statement, except Mr. Arnold, declared that to try such a long many of the points of law governing the case that will be clouded and obscure.

Almost every piece of machinery has its hidden cogs and wheels which are never seen by the visitor who is taken through the factory and which would be unknown to the careless spectator who views the product manufactured, and so it is with a trial in law.

The wheels of justice grind openly and plainly apparently, but there are many fine parts that the lay mind does not understand and only the experts—the lawyers—skilled in the study of law—know of these points.

Some Legal Points.

The fact that Frank is under indictment today means in many minds that he is therefore guilty and even those of education and high intelligence sometimes give this meaning to an indictment. In the eye of the law, Frank is an innocent man, as innocent as is the soul of little Mary Phagan, and before the law he will remain so until a jury of twelve men shall have heard all the evidence presented and then agreed unanimously that he is guilty.

The indictment of a man is merely the state's formal charge against him, and means that there is sufficient ground to suspect him of the guilt. A man is indicted by a body composed of from 18 to 23 of his fellow citizens, known as the grand jury, and who are chosen from the men who compose the veniremen for the trial jury. They are theoretically of a higher class of citizenship than the men who are on the trial jury.

A grand jury hearing is extra, that is only one side is heard. When Solicitor Dorsey presented to the grand jury a bill of indictment against Frank, who had been bound over after an investigation by the coroner's jury, Frank had no chance to defend himself.

The question at issue was not whether or not he was guilty, but whether or not there was sufficient reason to suspect his guilt and to cause him to go to trial for the crime the coroner's jury had charged to.

Had the state, through its solicitor, not been able to bring enough evidence to raise the question of his guilt, the coroner's jury would have returned a "no bill" and the matter would have gone no further. However, at any other time that Frank or a succeeding case might have responded the case and either indicted or found a "no bill."

Detectives Appear As Prosecutors. Frank was indicted and Detectives Pat Campbell and John Starnes appear on the indictment as the prosecutors. In Georgia anyone may prosecute anyone for any crime and in criminal cases, unless some other person comes forward as formal prosecutor, it is customary to appoint one or more of the officers who have worked on the case as the prosecutors or prosecutors.

The indictment formally presented to the court contains the specific charge against the man indicted, stating in detail the state, county and city in which the crime was alleged to have been committed, the date and the name of the person injured.

It bears the signature of the solicitor and of the prosecutors and of the witnesses who appeared before the grand jury to secure the indictment. It also bears the names of the grand jurors who returned the bill and when court convenes the counsel for the defendants enter upon it in writing the plea of the defendant.

Should the plea be "guilty," the judge will, after such investigation as he deems proper, impose sentence. In Frank's case the plea will be "not guilty," and in this case the finding of the grand jury and the plea of the defendant constitute the issue to be tried.

As a usual rule all of the witnesses to be used and the veniremen from whom the trial jury is to be drawn will be asked to raise their right hands and swear to "tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in the case of the state against Leo M. Frank."

All witnesses in this case will please raise and be sworn. Solicitor Dorsey will announce and in a tone Deputy Pienle Miner will repeat the order.

When the witnesses have arisen they will be asked to raise their right hands and swear to "tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in the case of the state against Leo M. Frank."

In all important cases it is usual for both sides to desire that all witnesses be "put under the rule," which is a legal term meaning that they must be excluded from the courtroom until such time as they shall be needed to testify.

When the trial of Mrs. Appelman for the murder of her husband, Jerry A. Appelman, her young son, Claude Henderson, who was used as a witness, was not allowed to remain in court with his mother until he had been put upon the stand and had completed his testimony regarding the relationship between his mother and stepfather.

Following the swearing in of the witnesses, Clerk John H. Jones will call the names of the twelve men on the first jury panel. The names of the men from whom a trial jury of twelve is expected to be selected were drawn out last week by Judge J. T. Pendleton from among the names of 6,000 others. These men who constitute the ones from whom petit or grand juries are selected are chosen every two years from every county by commissioners appointed by a superior court judge. They are supposed to be the 6,000 highest class of citizens among the registered voters.

When the names of those expected to try Frank were picked out last week Judge Pendleton drew the names from the jury box, selecting the names of 144 men and from these selecting in the same way 48 men who are divided into panels of twelve each. The panels, in the order in which the names were drawn out, are: first, second, third and fourth panels respectively, and it will be the names of the men constituting the first panel that Deputy Jones will be requested to step into the jury box and be sworn.

Solicitor Dorsey will then administer the oath to each one by which they will swear to answer truthfully all questions pertaining to their fitness to try the case at issue.

The solicitor next questions each one to determine whether or not he is legally qualified to serve. "Off for cause, your honor," is legally qualified to serve. "He is competent, your honor," is legally qualified to serve. "He is competent, your honor," is legally qualified to serve.

On the other hand, should he show by his answers that there is no legal reason why he should not serve, the solicitor states: "He is competent, your honor." The solicitor then begins the selection of the jury. When the venireman has shown by his sworn answers that he is qualified the real fight begins.

Theoretically the first twelve men whose names are drawn out would give Leo Frank a fair trial, but in a spirit of fairness the law gives the state the right to challenge any one of the twelve men.

Frank and the state some lawyer in the selection of the twelve men, "friend and true," who are to pass upon the question of his guilt or innocence.

In all felony cases in Georgia the defense may arbitrarily "strike" the truth in the case of the state against Leo M. Frank.

While each side may strike, the state is given the first chance to pass upon a possible juror and after the state has declared a venireman competent to serve on the jury, he and his assistants consult among themselves as to the advisability of choosing him. While this is going on the defense is also at the same task, so that if the state accepts the man as a juror, they will know what to do with him.

Should the man prove acceptable to the state, the solicitor utters the formal: "Juror, look on prisoner; prisoner, look on juror." Then the defense indicates its decision in regard to him and should he prove acceptable to the defense, the leading counsel says: "You may be sworn."

In this the juror passes into the juryroom where he waits until twelve men are selected and then all return to the courtroom.

are employed who do nothing but aid the attorneys in selecting juries. Some of these men are lawyers who have become so noted for this that they are more valuable in that way than in any other, and others are men who have never been in the law, but who come from walks of life where they have a wide acquaintance, and who have in addition to this made a study of the characteristics of various men.

The list of 144 men chosen by Judge Pendleton is not kept secret and before the case is opened the lawyers for both sides will have had two days to study the list and to select the individual characteristics of each. The past history of these men will also be known and also their records in the past when service upon juries.

Sometimes past knowledge of a venireman is not always complete and again it fails to aid the side which has it in possession. There is a story going the rounds of the Atlanta bar of a certain lawyer who in representing the defense was most grateful to note that the state had accepted as a juror a contractor who the year previous had built a house for him.

The relations between the contractor and the lawyer for the defense had been most pleasant and the lawyer was happy in thought that the contractor would certainly listen favorably to him instead of to the other side. It was that same man who hung out for a conviction for twelve hours and caused the case to end in a mistrial.

When the entire 144 men have been called into the box, twelve at a time, and twelve men have been chosen, other names may be drawn similarly from the jury box or the judge may order the sheriff to go out into the streets and gather in as many citizens as may be necessary to select from the list of names. These are known as talesmen, and must show that they are qualified as the others have done before they can be named as jurors.

State Will Open Trial.

The state which is always the plaintiff in criminal cases, opens the trial, either by the solicitor giving a short outline of the case before the court, or by the attorney's action of the first witness.

In case a postponement is asked by either side it may be given on the "legal showing," which is decided upon by the judge. The absence of a material witness, then, or the illness of a witness shown to be material, the illness of leading counsel, or any cause which seems to the judge to require a postponement may constitute a "legal showing." This necessarily comes before the case is opened.

The state as the case goes on will introduce its witnesses and evidence one at a time. The solicitor may ask to "lead" the witnesses, and the witnesses, as the lawyers for the defense may ask none of the witnesses to be called.

By "leading" questions is meant such questions as would suggest to the witness the answer he is desired. On the other hand, the other side is cross-examining the witness and may ask any questions he deems proper and they are pertinent.

After the state has introduced all the witnesses it desires to use and submitted what it desires in the form of evidence that has been allowed, the state "closes" the case. The defense proceeds to bring forth its evidence and testimony in practically the same manner. Some of the defense attorneys open for the defense by giving his statement or version of the affair.

The defense may give any or no statement, or as long as it is short as he may desire, provide he sticks to the case. He is added pertinent to the case. He makes his statement not under oath and neither counsel for or against him may ask him a question or suggest any answer. His consent to be cross-examined by the state, in which the state's attorney is allowed to ask any questions he will and he may answer what questions he sees fit to reply to.

The right to make a statement is given such statement as he may deem proper for the defense. It should not be under oath and the jury may weigh as it may see proper to give it. The jury may believe it or not, but it is in preference to the sworn testimony of the state.

A defendant in a felony case usually makes a statement, but it is exceedingly rare that he allows himself to be cross-examined.

Another feature of the case that lies with the defendant is the question of his character. Should Frank be openly known to be of the vilest character on record, no matter pertinent to this could be mentioned by the state, unless he first, either by testimony or evidence or by his own statement, put his character in issue.

What Will Frank Do?

Should he put his character in issue he then gets down to the bars and the state may attack it.

Should Frank do this and despite the attacks that the state might make to make, prove an unblemished reputation, this would not necessarily make a difference.

The law, as explained by a leading Atlanta attorney, means by not allowing a defendant to put his character in evidence that he may be tried for one particular thing of character of previous record to make an acquittal, means that same thing. It is too easy to get someone to swear that he is a good man. It is not in one case in a thousand that a defendant voluntarily puts his character in issue. It is a matter of pure and unblemished reputation.

Why not? Frank apparently has no cause for fear putting his character in issue, it is believed that there is not for chance in a hundred that he will do so.

A skilled layer of mosaics works with small fragments of stone—they fit into more places than the larger chunks.

The skilled advertiser works with small words—they fit into more minds than big phrases.

The simpler the language the greater the certainty that it will be understood by the least intelligent reader.

The construction engineer plans his roadbed where there is a minimum of grade—he works along the lines of least resistance.

The advertisement which runs into mountainous style is badly surveyed—all minds are not built for high-grade thinking.

Advertising must be simple. When it is tricked out with the jewelry and silks of literary expression, it looks as much out of place as a ball dress at the breakfast table.

The buying public is only interested in facts. People read advertisements to find out what you have to sell.

The advertiser who can fire the most facts in the shortest time gets the most returns. Blank cartridges make noise, but they do not hit—blank talk, however clever, is only wasted space.

You force your salesmen to keep to solid facts—you don't allow them to sell muslin with quotations from Omar, or trousers with excerpts from Marie Corelli. You must not tolerate in your printed selling talk anything that you are not willing to countenance in personal salesmanship.

Cut out clever phrases if they are inserted to the sacrifice of clear explanations—write copy as you talk. Only, be more brief. Publicity is costlier than conversation—ranging in price downward from $10 a line; talk is not cheap, but the most expensive commodity in the world.

Sketch in your ad to the stenographer. Then you will be so busy "saying it" that you will not have time to bother about the gewgaws of writing. Afterwards take the typewritten manuscript and cut out every word and every line that can be erased without omitting an important detail. What remains in the end is all that really counted in the beginning.

Cultivate brevity and simplicity. "Savon Francais" may look smarter, but more people will understand "French soap." Sir Isaac Newton's explanation of gravitation covers six pages, but the schoolboy's terse and homely "What goes up must come down" clinches the whole thing in six words.

Indefinite talk wastes space. It is not 100% productive. The copy that omits prices sacrifices half its pulling power—it has a tendency to bring lookers instead of buyers. It often creates false impressions. Some people are bound to conceive the idea that the goods are higher priced than in reality—others, by the same token, are just as likely to infer that the prices are lower and go away thinking that you have exaggerated your statements.

The reader must be searched out by the copy. Big space is cheapest because it doesn't waste a single eye. Publicity must be on the offensive. There are far too many advertisers who keep their lights on top of their bushel—the average citizen hasn't time to overturn your bushel.

Small space is expensive. Like a one-flake snow-storm, there is not enough of it to lay.

Space is a comparative matter after all. It is not a case of how much is used, as how it is used. The passengers on the limited express may realize that Jones has tacked a twelve-inch shingle on every post and fence for a stretch of five miles, but they are going too fast to make out what the shingles say, yet the two-foot letters of Brown's big bulletin board on top of the hill leap at them before they have a chance to dodge it. And at that it doesn't cost nearly so much as the sum total of Jones' dinky display.

Just so advertisements attractively displayed every day or every other day for a year in one big newspaper, will find the eye of all readers, no matter how rapidly they may be "going" through the advertising pages, and produce more results than a dozen piking pieces of copy scattered through half a dozen dailies.

RAILWAYS AND UNIONS AGREE TO ARBITRATE

Board of Mediation Breaks the Deadlock and There Will Be No Strike.

New York, July 26.—The threatened strike of 40,000 conductors and trainmen of forty-five eastern railroads for higher wages and improved working conditions will not be called. Articles of agreement to arbitrate, under the Newlands act, the questions at issue were signed today by the employees' representatives and conference committee of railroad managers.

The agreement was not reached until the managers had withdrawn the proposal that their own grievances against the men should be arbitrated. This claim, the managers announced today, they had relinquished to "protect the public" from a tie-up which they said the employees insisted to force if the railroads persisted in pressing their points. Today's peaceful outcome of the dispute was the result of efforts made by the board of mediation and conciliation recently created in the hurriedly passed Newlands act to meet the situation. The board, consisting of Judge William Lee Chamberlain, Judge Martin A. Knapp and G. W. Hanger, brought about today's agreement after conferences with the disputants, which continued more than a week.

With the elimination of the eight grievances for which the railroads desired consideration, the articles of arbitration comprise, without alteration, the sixteen original demands presented by the conductors and trainmen. The only point gained by the railroads was the provision that the award of the board of arbitration is to be constituted later of six members, three from the railroads and three from the public.

The articles were signed on behalf of the men by W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and A. B. Garfield, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, and for the railroads by the conference committee of the conference committee of railroad managers.

The members of the mediation board returned tonight to Washington, where they will report to the president. The board will not again be called into action unless the four arbitrators nominated by the railroads and men fail to agree on a fifth and sixth to complete the arbitration. It is that contingency the mediation board will select the two necessary members.

Following Chairman Lee's statement today that the railroads had withdrawn their claims against the men in order to "protect the public," President Lee of the trainmen presented to the mediator a letter setting forth his views concerning the employees' demand that the railroads' grievances should not be arbitrated. The letter says in part: "There never has been a time when we had even the remotest idea that the law governing arbitration was enacted for the benefit only of the employees. On the contrary, we recognize the right of the railroads to invoke its provisions at the proper time and in the proper manner, but we will not concede the employer a right to sweep aside the prescribed method of presenting grievances."

GATE CITY LODGE WILL HOLD COMMUNICATION

Gate City Lodge, No. 1, Free and Accepted Masons, has issued through its worshipful master, J. LeRoy Duncan, invitations to a special communication to be held Tuesday evening, July 29, at its handsome lodge room in the Masonic temple. The communication has been called at 8:30 o'clock in order to give the Masons residing in the city an opportunity to witness the ceremony without having to attend the lodge in Atlanta. Gate City lodge is famed for its beautiful recitations and numbers among its members some of the most prominent Masons of the state. Much interest is being manifested in the ceremony among the Masons generally. The degree will be conferred by C. E. Hall, past district deputy, and the lecture on the degree will be conferred by Thomas H. Jeffries, past grand master of Masons of Georgia.

NEGRO USED BULLETS ON DEBT COLLECTORS

Tampa, Fla., July 26.—Ernest "Casper" White, died here this morning, the second victim of a jobless Thursday morning between Columbus Highway, across and Ernest White, 70, of H. Austin and G. C. White, White, who had attempted to break to the negro lodge with the expressed intention of collecting a debt which was instantly killed. White's body was seriously injured and Moulde camped in the street. The negro was wounded three times. Solicitor Jackson released the negro, his plea of self-defense, and White left town immediately because threats made against his life.

Death Sentence for Henwood.
Denver, Colo., July 26.—James P. Henwood today was sentenced to death within the week of October 24 for the murder of George R. "Pop" Ford, which he was recently convicted after a second trial. The judge, however, commented that the governor's committee is sent to the legislature.

According to statistics, one woman a thousand has been a telegram as little emotion as the display opening a lock down.

Author and Leading Man Of Play, "The Tennessean"

MISS WILL ALLEN DROMGOOLE AND JACK ROSELEIGH.

Miss Dromgoole is the author of "The Tennessean," a beautiful story of Tennessee, which will appear to all southerners, and Mr. Roseleigh is the leading man in the company which will give its first presentation in Nashville, August 11. The play will be presented by the Billy Long stock company, which is pleasantly remembered in Atlanta, and this winter it will be put on the road, and very probably be shown in Atlanta by the leading man and native Tennessean, and Miss Dromgoole is a brilliant southern writer who first became known two years ago, when she wrote "The Island of Beautiful Things." "The Tennessean" will soon come out in book form.

The Full Flower of Joyeuse

Mr. and Mrs. John K. Otter have moved into their new home still called "Joyeuse" and occupying one of the most beautiful sites in the country. "Joyeuse" was one of the first suburban homes built around Atlanta, and in it has been centered, most charming social life. The little cottage which formerly made the home was sealed in a forest of trees and the news that it was to give place to a blazer on the island of "Joyeuse" showed the many who had enjoyed hospitality there. They feared they might be closed in from the nature of the place, the rippling of the leaves, the ripple of the water.

A gifted Georgian has written that a residence belongs to civilization and a home to nature. "Joyeuse" combined the spirit of both and a blessing now on the spirit of the old and means the full flower of the spirit of "Joyeuse."

English Architecture Prevails.

The lines of English architecture mark the plan of the house which has its foundation on a solid stone and is cement and wood. The spirit of the plan would suggest at once the broad front porch of the front of the house is unobscured by the space which marks the broad entrance. The side porch of the same size is enclosed and can be converted into a sun parlor in winter. A terrace of the old front deep defines the front and side of the house, while the side of the entrance is a simple porch supported by stone columns.

The entrance hall is a broad and spacious apartment in itself which shows the impression that the house is a place where people are living and that there is a wide open welcome.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN NICARAGUA PACT

Washington, July 26.—Important modifications are to be made in the proposed treaty with Nicaragua by which the United States would establish a protectorate over the southern republic. It has been discovered that in the terms of the agreement originally outlined by Secretary Bryan, Nicaragua would have been prevented from ever joining with other republics to form a single Central American union.

This was not contemplated by the administration when the treaty was proposed, and the suggestion has created suspicion among other Central American countries. At a conference today, between Secretary Bryan and members of the senate foreign relations committee, it was agreed that the original draft of the treaty should be changed so that Nicaragua might be included in the compact, providing that it should not stand in the way of any future action Nicaragua might decide to take toward joining a Central American confederation.

Secretary Bryan assured the com-

All the News of Real Estate and Building.

Bank clearances for the past week exceeded the same week in 1912 by more than $100,000. The fact that this does not signify much, as the dealers are inclined to look upon it as a sign that the succeeding weeks of the summer will show a still greater increase.

The past week's activities have been mostly confined to small sales, of which there has been quite a large amount. Several important houses were announced, but nothing of magnitude.

Harris & White's prediction in last Sunday's "Constitution" that in the future few subdivisions would be opened, and those already on the market would be steadily improved, is not proving to come true. A large number of building permits were issued last week for structures in the various subdivisions about the city and a number of them will be issued the coming week should the building activity continue. Atlanta's Ocean Is Just Ten Minutes' Ride From Five Points, and With Mame Along It's Got the Seashore "Skin a Mile!"

This seaside scene is not the Atlantic ocean, but Atlanta's ocean, more generally known as Mr. Dan Carey's Piedmont lake!

And on one of these scorching hot days—about 98 in the shade, say—it's a mighty fine place to go. Did you ever try it? Bundle out early in the morning before you go to work, or maybe late in the afternoon when you're hot and tired! Man alive! It's as fine as the mythical spring of eternal youth.

Just wrap your bathing suit in a newspaper, tuck it under your arm and grab a car. Be sure and take Mame with you, for she's half the fun. What is a beach without a "beach"?

By the time the breeze down shady Peachtree has blown in your face for ten minutes you're at the seashore feeling fit as a fiddle, and a thousand miles from the cares and heat of Five Points, with its sweltering skyscrapers.

In a jiffy you are both rigged out for the water. Twin splashes from the boardwalk over the lake, and the fun is on!

Swim around the lake, dive from the platforms, shoot the chutes and duck Mame twice! You are ready to go home and glad you're livin'.

It's got the seashore "skin a mile!" Try it!

His Obituary.

(From The New York Evening Post.) Sam Polk was editor of The Polk-town Clarion in Tennessee. Horatio F. Johnson, as he called his name, was running for public office. Sam said some things about Horatio in his paper and Horatio announced in the courthouse square that he intended to go down to The Clarion office and end the earthly existence of the mis-speller coward who wrote it. These things were reported to Sam. He went down to his office to compose a fitting reply.

EX-PREMIER COACHES CHILDREN OF ROYALTY

Lord Rosebery Is Teaching Sports to English Princes and Princess.

London, July 26.—Lord Rosebery has already had his invitation to stay at Balmoral with the king and queen this autumn. The young princes think the world of the ex-premier because for one thing he enters through into all their ideas of sport and knows all about it. One of Lord Rosebery's pet avocations is to see a king in a woman's hand and neither of his daughters ever shoulders one or pipe a fiddle.

Though not a golfer, he is a great authority on the game and the boy princes and Princess Mary having taken it up with great zest of late go to him for information on knotty points. He was the special guest Princess Mary recently invited to her confirmation. Something of the splendid horsemanship of her royal highness is also due to the admirable tips she has had from him from time to time.

All his friends are aware how absent-minded Lord Rosebery is. Recently the queen was consulting him, as she often does, as to whether she should get into a certain party and her husband for the court ball, when looking her straight in the eyes he replied: "It is a nine-hole course." He was thinking of the new golf links he had recently put down at Balmoral. Fortunately her majesty has a keen sense of humor, so she was not offended. He has never been interested in American women and they are never invited to Balmoral, though he has expressed some admiration for Maxine Elliott.

ATLANTA CIVIC LEAGUE PLANS CHANGE OF NAME

The Atlanta Civic League held a meeting in Carnegie library yesterday and plans for changing the name to the Woman's Suffrage League were discussed. Mrs. Mary Smith, the president, alternated with Mrs. A. D. Jones in the chair and Mrs. Frances took a prominent part in the discussion. Mrs. Frances Whitehead announced the campaign of education planned by the Atlanta Civic League, which will deliver the suffrage pilgrimage to Washington from all parts of the country on August 21. She has enlisted a campaign for members for the new Woman's Suffrage League, and reports splendid success.

Trial by Jury on Its Trial in England

Much Disgust With the System and Many Favor Abolition—Some of the Criticisms of the System.

(Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.) London, July 26.—Trial by jury in England is in the melting pond and no one can now tell how that institution which patriotic British orators have been in the habit of alluding to as the "palladium of our British liberty" will emerge. There are a lot of people, and among them an enormously large number of judges, lawyers and other experts who would like to see it suppressed altogether, but it is hardly likely that the man in the street, who has a deep-rooted distrust of the system, will consent. At the same time he is deeply disaffected with the system which compels him to give up days and sometimes weeks of his time to listening to other people's troubles, so it is not unlikely he will agree to some compromise whereby curtailing the system.

The first step in changing any old established law or custom in England is to appoint a royal commission to take testimony and report on it. That was done in the case of the jury system in December, 1911, and the commission has just published its report. It is worthy of note that this is almost a record in speed for a royal commission, perhaps due to the fact that this particular commission was presided over by Lord Mervyn, who also had charge of the Titanic investigation. Lord Mervyn is a retired judge and a member of the peerage was a great judge and was noted for the expedition with which he conducted the cases in his courts, and no man is better fitted to lead an inquiry on the jury system, for he has sat as a criminal judge where juries are the inevitable rule, as a judge of the king's bench, where cases are sometimes tried by jury and sometimes without, as a chancery judge, where juries are usually dispensed with, and as president of the court, where sometimes he has "assisted" by a jury and sometimes not.

What he thinks of juries in criminal cases may be judged from a remark which he is said to have made in his retirement. He was once asked by a barrister of lawyers, "It was: which I were placed on the trial as a criminal offense and had my choice, would choose a trial by jury if I were guilty, for then I might get off, but if I were innocent, I should strongly prefer to intrust my life and liberty to a judge."

More vigorous but much to the same effect was the address made at a famous Scottish judge to a jury who had just brought in a verdict of "Not guilty" in a murder trial. "Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, "if ever it should be my duty to commit murder and be placed on trial for my life, I pray God that I shall be tried before twelve such asses as yourselves."

It is clear, however, that when the Normans came they found the jury system in full swing, and they adopted it and developed it. At that time it was rather an assemblage of witnesses and a man of knowledge, who knew of their own knowledge all the facts in the case and were called to assist the king's judge in doing justice. Especially in civil cases the jury were men of local knowledge and high character, who were sworn to speak the truth, and they were known as "wise men." They did no more than agree on a state of facts, and swear to it, and the judge formed his opinion and gave his verdict on the evidence.

Gradually the jurors lost their character as witnesses. This was due to the process known as "afforcement," which was applied when the jurors felt they had not sufficient information. They were then empowered to "afforcement," or add to their number, persons who had the necessary knowledge and separated from the original jurors, who so assumed the semi-judicial character they now hold. The reason for most of the present complaint against the jury system is an instrument of justice in that life is much more complicated than in the days when any twelve "lawful men" of the village could be relied on to know all about any of the problems which might be brought before them. If Giles moved his boundaries and encroached on Rogers' land there was little difficulty in settling at the truth of the matter, and if the lord of the manor unduly oppressed his tenants the men of the village knew what was just. Now, however, the complaint is made that the ordinary juror is incapable of understanding the intricate commercial and scientific problems that come before him. The clauses of a charter, for instance, are often so involved that they puzzle skilled admiralty lawyers, and yet common juries in the city of London, made up of small shopkeepers, caretakers and such persons, are daily called on to interpret them.

In murder trials, too, common juries are compelled to decide between the conflicting statements of scientific experts. In the case of the American dentist, Criggen, for instance, who was hanged for the murder of a woman, the identification of the fragments of Mrs. Criggen's body which were found, depended wholly on whether a mark on a couple of square inches of skin was a scar from an old operation or a case caused by the skin being folded when it was buried in the cellar of Criggen's house. One set of experts swore that the arrangement of the cells proved it to be a scar, and the other swore just as positively that it was a crease. The juryman peered at it through a microscope, looked wise and plumped for the scar and Criggen was hanged. In this case no one believes that a mistake was made, but if the jury in their wisdom had decided for the crease theory—which was just as strongly supported by experts as the theory they accepted—Criggen would have been alive today.

Another serious cause of complaint, this time from the lawyers, but from the public, is the waste of time involved for the man who is unfortunate enough to be summoned on a jury. Some one in the sheriff's office takes the tax books and picks out at random the names of persons who occupy houses worth more than a certain sum. He chooses three or four names as many as will be needed to provide for all emergencies, and the unfortunate thus summoned must attend at court, when a jury is selected, and the case is likely to be a long one. The judge tells the men who are not chosen that they may go, but that they must return next day or next week, as the case may be. The men chosen may be detained for a day or a month, listening to evidence which is of no interest to them and thinking of their neglected business.

British jurymen are not paid and real hardship sometimes results. One of the witnesses before the royal commission was a laborer who lived at Bournemouth, a south coast watering place. He earned only $7 a week, but was the nominal owner of a house worth $10 a year. He subsisted half of it, however. He was summoned on a jury and had to attend at Winchester, the county seat, forty miles away, pay for his own railway fare and support himself for more than a week, during which, of course, he earned no wages. If he hadn't done so, the judge would have sent him to jail.

Somewhat similar is the complaint made by the "lawful men" of the county of Middlesex, which takes in most of London. The high courts of justice are situated in London and much the greater part of the litigation for the whole of the country is tried in there. Middlesex must supply the jurors for the high court, so that in addition to settling the troubles of their own neighbors the men of Middlesex have to judge between the citizens of Liverpool and Birmingham and other places of which they know nothing. It is hard to see how, if the jury system is to be retained at all, this can be avoided, for it would obviously be a greater hardship to compel men from Yorkshire and Lancashire for instance, to travel to London to serve on a jury.

Special Jury Attacks. Particularly severe criticism is leveled at what is known here as the "petty jury." As stated above, it is composed of men living in houses of the value of $10 a year or more. Litigants who have a more intelligent jury have the privilege of demanding a special jury whose members must live in houses rented at $100 or more. But in England the great majority of persons living in $100 houses are publicans, because the value of their liquor licenses monopoly adds a fictitious value to their premises and the result is that most special juries are parties of publicans and in many cases less intelligent than petty juries. Add to this the fact that most publicans are Tories and you can imagine the plight of a liberal candidate for parliament, for instance, who men before them a jury for damages for a campaign libel.

Then there is the coroner's jury. If you are walking along the street and a man taps you on the shoulder and tells you the coroner wants you, go along with him. The coroner doesn't want to "sit on" you. He merely wants you to sit with him on a corpse, and if you happen to be an alien he will excuse you. This is the coroner's method of summoning a jury. He sends his officer into the street to pick up the first twelve men he meets, and if they happen to be one of them you are in for a week of work.

The commission does not see its way at present to abolish trial by jury altogether, but it does advise that in the majority of civil cases it might well be dispensed with. It also advises the creation of one class of jurymen only and some fair system of rotation in summoning jurors—and what will be most appreciated by the jurors, if it is to be a success, is that they be paid for their service.

GIRL MOTHER HELD AT POLICE STATION

She Will Be Sent to Reformatory and Her Baby to the Orphans' Asylum.

After a chase which began in Atlanta a year and a half ago, Mary Ogle, a blue-eyed girl-mother of 14 years, with a laughing baby girl in her arms, was brought to police headquarters Saturday night in company with her foster mother, Mrs. Junie Harvey, by Detective Coker. The detective made the arrests at the request of the girl's step-grandfather, J. H. Bedford, of 313 West North avenue, and H. C. Ogle, her uncle, who have been following her ever since her disappearance more than a year ago.

The little mother will be sent to a reformatory institution in Cincinnati, while the little baby girl will be placed in an orphan asylum or foundling home. The mother of Mary Ogle died when Mary was born, and Mrs. Harvey then became the little girl's foster mother. They lived in Atlanta until about 18 months ago and suddenly disappeared. The step-grandfather, who had always looked upon little Mary as if she was his own grandchild, immediately became alarmed, and with her uncle, instituted a search for her. The first news they had was thirteen months ago, when they learned that in Macon she had become a mother. Before they could reach her there, however, she and her foster mother had moved on, and were next heard of in Barneville, where they came to Atlanta, about a week ago.

Detective Coker had been working on the case about a week when he located them Saturday night at 152 South Pryor street. With them was a Miss DeLaughter, who is said to have come to Atlanta with them from Barneville. The little mother and her baby were turned over to the care of Matron Doherty, while Mrs. Harvey and Miss DeLaughter were allowed to return to the South Pryor street house.

Mary Ogle's Father Coming.

W. M. Ogle, father of Mary Ogle, who lives between Atlanta and Marietta, is expected to call for the pair Sunday morning.

At police headquarters the little mother looked up with big bewildered blue eyes at the policemen and the disturbance about her as if she did not understand.

She was yet in short skirts, and her black hair hung in a ring plait down her back. She never smiled at all very faintly and watery eyes as she glanced occasionally at the golden-haired baby girl, which nestled and cooed beside her.

Meanwhile this chubby little lady was greatly amused, laughing and cooing at the policemen who paid her attention and grabbing every rough finger that strove gently to chuckle her under her rosy little chin.

If a man has too much money it's no task at all for him to acquire more.

BLACKHEADS AND PIMPLES ON FACE

Would Itch and Burn. Caused Great Disfigurement. Also Had Druff on Scalp. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Perfectly.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 44, Matthews, Ga.—"For three years or more I was troubled with pimples and blackheads. As fast as my face would itch and burn and then the pimples would break out. They looked almost as if I had measles, causing great disfigurement. They would make my face very red and sore. Then they festered and came to a head and large boils would come on my chin and nose.

I also had dandruff which caused my scalp to itch and burn. It itched and burned so that I had to scratch it until it was irritated. The dandruff would fall out and I would have to wash my hair very often. I used several remedies which did not cure and gave me but little relief. After I received a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I began using them according to directions. I secured two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment which cured me perfectly." (Signed) Miss W. M. Walker, July 31, 1912.

Then you buy a fine toilet soap think of the advantage Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap ever made. In addition to being absolutely pure and refreshingly fragrant, it is delicately yet effectively medicated, giving you two soaps in one, a toilet and a skin soap at one price. Cuticura Soap 25c, and Cuticura Ointment 50c, are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample sent free. With 32-p. Skin Book. Address—New York, Dept. T, Boston.

Get them who share and clasp with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

At police headquarters the little mother looked up with big bewildered blue eyes at the policemen and the disturbance about her as if she did not understand.

Few men are willing to take good advice if it is free; also they hate to pay for it.

The enterprising summer girl has no use for the young man who wastes his time kissing her hand.

Between two evils it is better to marry for money than for a chance to get even.

HAVEVILLE WAS THE NEVER-NEVER AND TO HIS FRECKLED-FACED ORPHAN BOY

By BRITT CRAIG —

A schoolroom without a globe—one of those revolving maps of the world and all that's on it—about as complete as a blue-back speller without the story of Old Dog Tray or an arithmetic without the multiplication table.

A globe holds an irresistible fascination for every primary scholar, purely for the fact that teacher forbids its use except for purposes of instruction. There is one on the teacher's desk in the school at the Decatur Home for Orphans.

One day the teacher happened into the classroom after study hours. Roy Montaigne, 8 years old, unburned and lively as a March hare, sat on the floor, spinning the forbidden globe that stood between his knees, with a chubby finger he was making minute examination of the western hemisphere.

The teacher disliked such infraction of the school's discipline, and he administered a rebuke.

"What are you doing there, young man?"

Roy looked up, a little frightened, removed his cap as became a dutiful scholar, and stammered:

"Lookin' for Haveville? Where is it?"

Some teachers have a vein of humor and some haven't. This one happened to possess a streak of that leaving quality, and he could hardly repress a smile.

Why Haveville?

"Why Haveville?" he exclaimed. Without removing his finger, which happened to rest somewhere in the extreme southern portion of Asia Minor, Roy returned his eyes to the globe and said:

"Cause I got two sisters there, and I want to know just zactly wher it is."

Which brings on a story—a pathetic story—a story that touches the soul and reaches the heart strings like the mellow plaint of a violin's sob. Roy Montaigne's story it is, and it is like a fairy tale, without the usual happy ending.

Roy has been in the Decatur orphanage for three years, and the day the teacher caught him tinkering with the globe was the first time he had made known the fact that he possessed even such relatives as sisters.

He is an irrepressible little fellow, always doing something, which generally happens to be something he shouldn't. Once he tried to oudo a buxom call in a buttoning match when the call tried to run him through a fence. Roy reached the fence several feet ahead, but the fence allowed no loopholes.

Roy is manly, and his manhood suffered no downfall when confronted with such an unmanly thing as an infant cow. He turned upon the animal with the animal's own weapons. Baby Cow's head chanced to be the hardest, with the result that Roy sustained something just above the left eye that sent him to the hospital, and now resembles an elaborate birth mark.

But that is beside the story. It dates back to the death of Roy's mother in 1910, when she left him and two daughters to the tender mercies of charitable institutions. Roy awoke on the morning after he died to find Julia and Bessie, his sisters, gone, and a kind-faced man awaiting to take him away.

He didn't know where he was going to be taken, and he didn't care so very much, but he would have liked to know where Julia and Bessie had gone. He loved them as much as they loved him, which happens to be saying a whole lot. He asked the kind-faced man, and the kind-faced man said:

"There's gone to Haveville, and you needn't worry."

Roy knew as much about Haveville as he knew about the evolution of man, but because the kind-faced man was a stranger, and because he had always been taught to be so respectful to strangers as not to become unduly inquisitive, he forced himself to be content with the knowledge that his sisters had gone to Haveville, and let it go at that.

It was hard, though, to refrain from questions regarding the particular geographical location of Haveville and the mode of life that is lived therein. Although he asked no questions, Haveville remained as indelible on his memory as an ink spot on a new gown.

Strange Visions of the Place.

He had visions of it existing far beyond strange seas or in some tropic clime where the weather was always sunny, and where little girls grew up to be like the fairies his mother had often read about.

He thought it was away over yonder somewhere, and he often after they had installed him in the orphanage, he used to sit and gaze at the rainbow and speculate in childish wonder whether or not its dazzling reaches reached to Haveville.

Once upon a time a inmate found him sitting on the veranda, looking perplexed and twiddling his toes.

"Say," he heard his chum, pointing to a rainbow that spanned the sky, "what town does that thing link at?"

The playmate didn't know, but he asked Roy the why of his interest in the rainbow.

"I wonder if it's Haveville," was his absent answer.

That Haveville was a matter of less than twelve miles would have seemed as improbable as the fact that he could have reached it in his home in a forty-minute car ride.

It was his fear that they dwelt in some child Elvira, and would never come back, and he would have to grow up to be a man without their being able to watch him grow and become the man he intended to become.

Then it was he had the hitting match with the calf. An ambulance came and carried him to Wesley Memorial hospital. He was feverish and semiconscious most of the time, and a trained nurse kept constant watch over his bedside.

He mumbled incessantly of Bessie and Julia, and when he grew well enough to talk rationally the nurses asked who they were. The little patient answered that they used to be his sisters.

"But they're in Haveville now," he said, with a tone of despair.

"When did you see them last?" asked the nurse.

"When mamma died, three years ago."

"And you haven't seen them since?"

The nurse was astonished. She had a perfect right to be.

"No'm. How could I? Think I'd get to see somebody that lives in Haveville?" There was ridicule in his voice.

"Why, you certainly can. It's only a little way. You catch a street car, and in a minute you're there."

It seemed incredible. Roy didn't tell her that he doubted her word, for he had been taught better manners; but in his heart of hearts he felt that she had been sadly misinformed.

"If you don't believe it," she told him, "look at the map."

Roy said he believed it purely for the sake of saying, but inwardly he resolved to investigate the first map he could lay hands on. So, that's why the teacher caught him breaking one of the strictest rules.

Even the teacher found it difficult to convince him that Haveville, after all, was a real, ordinary place, and that folks who went there to live remained just as normal and lifelike as always. Roy was credulous, and what is stronger than the credulity of a child?

His sisters are aged 12 and 13. They want to see their brother as badly as he wants to see them. The Haveville orphanage is a Methodist institution, and the Decatur home is maintained by the Baptist denomination. Officials of both places have agreed that the three youngsters shall have an early meeting, and that, in honor of the event, a big and hearty banquet will be served.

It will be Roy's greatest day, and he will explore Haveville with a spirit prouder and grander than the sensations felt by Ponce de Leon when he plunged into the moss and evergreen of a Florida clime to find the springs of perpetual youth.

A Constitution photographer paid him a visit last week. He doesn't look any larger than a cake of soap after a day's washing. Roy doesn't, but for the brevity of his years and the smallness of his stature, he's a regular farmer.

The photographer asked a little girl who sat under the shade of a generous oak if she could point out Roy Montaigne.

"Yes, sir! See that little fellow way out there on the hill—the one chopin' corn?" She pointed a finger at a diminutive figure in the cornfield, squinting an eye along the knuckle like a marksman aiming at a target. Working like a Trojan.

The sun seemed to have a grudge against the world—large, and black with merciless fury on the expansive acres of the orphanage farm. The heat shimmered in transparent waves from the soil. Roy seemed in the midst of it, attacking stalks of corn with a vengeance.

She called "Roy" across the field, in the heat, and his brief respite from labor, he threw aside his hoe, mopped his brow farmer-like with a big handkerchief and began trudging his way toward the visitor.

Other boys in the field, sweating in the heat, envied his brief respite from labor. They sought to destroy his pleasure by taunts and jeers. They leaned on their hoes, jealously watching him stride across the furrowed ground, and wondering what it was all about.

Cries came from all sides: "Calf, calf, calf, calf!"

But even the painful reminiscence of his conflict with the baby bovine failed to deter him as he made for the shade in which stood the photographer. He wondered what waited him—that could be up? Was some body going to take him to Haveville? Did the man that stood in the shade live there? Would he know Bessie and Julia?

Roy consented to pose when the camera man convinced him that taking a picture wasn't sinful or dangerous.

His face was dusty, and streaked with perspiration. His hands were in shape just as bad. The photographer suggested that he bathe. He asked the little girl:

"Won't you take him in and wash his face and hands?"

"He was truly boylike. 'Tessie—come on, Roy!'"

A look of righteous resentment was flashed upon the photographer and girl.

"Now, I ain't goin' to do it. I don't have to have no girl wash my face. If I can't do it myself, it ain't goin' to be done—that's all there is to it."

Certainly, the idea of a 12-year-old female performing his ablutions did appeal to his sense of the fitness of things. His resentment was justified.

ble. Not even a visitor had a right to humiliate him in such manner.

The picture was made after Roy had privately and unassisted bathed his face. As the man with the camera departed, the little fellow stood gazing at the retreating form with an air of indecision.

He had forgot to ask his visitor about Haveville! He was still unsatisfied of its location and condition. Maybe the stranger knew something about it that the teacher and nurse had failed to tell. Maybe he knew the truth that he feared they had not told!

He overtook the photographer and asked shyly and with a great show of diffidence:

"D'you live in Haveville?"

"Nope! Why?"

"Just wanted to know." An embarrassed toe dug in the sand, and his owner forgot all the many questions he had intended asking.

"How far is Haveville?"

"Oh, about twelve miles."

Roy looked squarely into the face of the man, his blue eyes squinting in the sun.

"Are you sure?"

"Yep! Why?"

"Just wanted to know, that's all."

The photographer swung his camera across his shoulder and started to move away. Roy called again:

"Say, Mister, I want to ask some thin' else—how long does it take to go to Haveville?"

"No more'n an hour—forty minutes, maybe."

"Are you right sure that's a fact?"

"Yep! Why?"

"Just wanted to know, that's all."

The photographer walked away wondering at the questions of the child. He was again overtaken.

"Listen, Mister, have you ever been to Haveville?"

"Yes."

"What kind of a place is it?"

"Just like Decatur—not as big."

"Have they got a place for orphan just like this?"

"Yep!"

"Do they treat boys and girls specially girls, as good's they treat 'em here?"

"Suppose so—don't know exactly. Why?"

"Just wanted to know—that's all."

With which he darted up the hill blowing on a battered tin mouth organ a melody as spirited and happy as the plaint of a herd girl at the birth of love.

He had found the truth about Haveville.

LOWNDES COUNTY FAIR

WILL BEGIN NOVEMBER

Valdosta, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)

At a meeting of the fair committee the chamber of commerce, the matter of arranging the date for the Lowndes county fair, and the details of the program list, were closed up. The fair will begin Tuesday, November 4, and continue through November 8.

The program list of $1,000 was tentatively agreed upon with the idea that it be materially increased. A premium of $200 will be given for the best individual exhibit of farm products.

A purse of $100 for the second best individual exhibit, and $50 for the third best. Liberal premiums will also be offered for the best exhibits by boys' corn clubs and girls' canning clubs. Good prizes for horse race motorcycle races and other events that character will be given in addition to the $1,000 for the agricultural exhibits.

Many of the leading meat processors and merchants in the city have engaged space for special exhibits, and this feature of the fair will be unusually fine. The committee on entertainment and concessions is arranging for a superb line of attractions, the newest and most attractive yet seen at a county fair in Georgia.

NEGRO JUST ESCAPES

BEING EMBALMED ALIVE

Valdosta, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)

J. A. Kelly, a negro turpentine worker, had a narrow escape from being blamed alive, if such a thing were possible, in this city.

The man had been working at Kelly's, and was taken sick several weeks ago. While his daughter, taking him to his home at Pell City, Ga., he suddenly collapsed in the waiting room of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad here, and was believed dead. A. B. Walton, a negro undertaker, was requested to take charge of the body and prepare it for burial.

The body was removed to the undertaker's room and the embalmer ready to do his work. While he was on knives, fluids and paraphernalia with the job, the apparently dead man revived. He is yet alive, it is not believed he will recover.

Beautiful "Blue Ridge Highway" to Pierce Mountain Section; Autos May Roll Thro' Scenic Land on Roads of White Marble

By J. WALTER LEGRAND.

In the Blue Ridge mountains of north Georgia is a land of wondrous scenic beauty—long hidden from travel, because there have been no good roads leading through it. Soon, however, this country is to be opened to the tourists of the world by the construction of a great mountain highway through Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties. If—and it is all in the if—Pickens and Gilmer and Fannin counties will not do their part!

Here is a section holding untold possibilities as a mecca for summer resort seekers. Rolling hills stand out in grandeur against the cloud-flecked sky. The valleys are dotted with pretty green farms. Out of the hillsides flow mineral springs of rich medicinal value. No finer scenery is even anywhere in the world! It is indeed a section that should become world-famous for tourist travel.

And yet, because its hills are steep and its roads rough, and because no concerted effort has been made to overcome these obstacles and create good roads, the section has to this day remained inaccessible to the tourist.

Now at last, in the project of the Blue Ridge highway, the way is seen for opening up this land to travel. Piercing the mountain section with a splendid road, it will reveal to the tourists for the first time the virgin beauty of this hitherto untraveled country. After reaching northward 103 miles from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, Ga., a branch of the route, will go through Toccoa to Knoxville, while the main route will pass to the north, east into North Carolina.

OVER THE HILLS TO ATLANTA.

Over roads made of marble, from the many rich quarries of north Georgia, the highway will stretch onward to the mountains of western North Carolina. Over them it will pass through the "Sapphire Country" to Asheville, and thence to Washington and New York. This will be a splendid new route from the north to the south—over the hills to Atlanta. There will be no highway enterprise the south to rival for scenic grandeur.

The choicest route from New York clear to Jacksonville will then be this beautiful Blue Ridge highway. Thousands of tourists will be drawn to this particular route every year. The result will be a wonderful stimulus to the growth of these six north Georgia counties, from Fulton to Fannin, as well as advertising the wonders of Georgia to the world.

A splendid dream—is it not? "Dream, it is," answers the weakening chorus of those who have attempted to travel in its present ditched and rutted state so flatteringly pictured.

"And dream is all it ever shall be," adds the cynic. For it is a fact that when a group of "good roads boosters" traversed a few days ago the route from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, Ga., they were given the "bouncing of their lives." Suffice it to say that one of the party was thrown against the top of the car and suffered a nosebleed; and that more than once the machine went dead when a plunge through mountain streams brought water up to the engine. Everyone was bruised and sore from the trip. There are no good roads now in Pickens, Gilmer or Fannin counties.

COBB AND CHEROKEE WORKING CONVICTS.

But proof that this Blue Ridge highway is not "merely a dream" lies in the fact that the work is now actually under way in Cobb and Cherokee counties; and further, that the movement to start the work in the three upper counties is rapidly gaining strength and will probably soon crystallize in action.

Convicts are at work six days a week upon the route of this highway through Cobb and Cherokee, Marietta and Canton, the county seats from which the work is directed, are hotbeds of enthusiasm. Many beautiful stretches of road and many fills and gradings testify to the splendid work already accomplished. Cobb's pro rata number of the state's convicts is 40, while Cherokee's share is 27. Both are using the limit of their allotment and clamoring for more.

Contrast with this situation in Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin. Not one of these three counties, strange to say, has taken advantage of the state law which allows a division of the convicts among the counties in proportion to their population, for use in building roads. Under this law Pickens would receive eight convicts, Gilmer nine and Fannin ten, the three together being almost as many as Cherokee's.

COUNTIES MAY COMBINE FOR HIGHWAY WORK.

The movement has now been suggested that these three counties get together on the cooperative plan of uniting and letting one county take the entire force of 27 convicts for a certain period, after which they will go to the next county, and then to the third. This is a plan that has been adopted by other counties of Georgia with great success, and it is being warmly advocated as an immediate step toward the accomplishment of the highway.

Plans for the project go further, however, and include a proposed special tax in these counties to finance road construction work. It is contended that this tax is a great reality it is going to depend entirely upon the forty-second senatorial district, composed of these three counties, of Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin.

These are a group of interesting views taken on a recent automobile trip over the route of the proposed Blue Ridge highway. The heavy black line in the map shows the route followed, though a detour is proposed by way of Roswell and another between Ellijay and Talking Rock. At the top are two strikingly beautiful landscape scenes near Ellijay, in Gilmer county. On the left the lower picture shows a stretch of excellent road in Cherokee county, while on the right an auto is shown climbing a hill in Pickens county, near Talking Rock, with a wide valley stretching out beyond. The small center picture shows the ruins of an old copper mine situated just beside the road two miles south of Canton, which was operated by Governor Joseph E. Brown before the war.

which stand in a perpendicular line upon the map of Georgia, in the center of the extreme northern part of the state. The route from Jacksonville will soon be carried as far north as the Pickens county line, when the work in Cobb and Cherokee is rounded into shape. North Carolina promises a splendid road to the state line to meet the highway when constructed in Fannin county. The people of Murphy, N. C., are enthusiastic and are at work upon their plans already.

FEDERAL AID TALK RETARDS ROUTE.

Rumors have spread in north Georgia within the past few months that the federal government was going to appropriate funds for the proposed Blue Ridge highway. This began through the purchase by the government of a large forest reserve in Fannin and surrounding counties, amounting to nearly 200,000 acres. It was argued that the government should build a good road to this country in order to open up its own forest preserve to the travel of the nation. Analysis of the situation shows, however, that the government is planning only to improve the roads eventually through the forest reservation. The highway from Fulton to Fannin will have to be constructed practically entirely by the counties themselves. At best the government will only extend its aid after the project is fully launched and all counties are at work on a cooperative plan for the construction of the highway. The policy of the government in aiding road construction has always been to help only those who help themselves.

ELLIJAY A BOOSTING MOUNTAIN TOWN.

No town along the whole route traversed by the highway in Georgia is probably so enthusiastic as Ellijay, the county seat of Gilmer. This pretty little mountain town is nestled in the very foothills of the Blue Ridge range. Eighty-seven miles from Atlanta, on the Louisville and Nashville route toward Knoxville, it is the first place of importance reached after the mountain section is entered. It was here that a "booster because" was held on July 4, in the interest of the Blue Ridge highway. Enthusiasm for the project was given great impetus, and folks from along the proposed route gathered by the hundreds.

represents the forty-second district in the Georgia state senate, is one of the prime movers in the highway project. Dr. Watkins, who is an extensive land owner of Ellijay, is also one of its ardent boosters, while another is H. M. Ellington, editor of The Ellijay Courier. But there are many other boosters for the highway, not only in Ellijay, but all along the route. Asper, Ga., the county seat of Pickens, has many enthusiasts, and so has Blue Ridge, Ga., the county seat of Fannin.

SPLENDID LAND FOR SUMMER RESORTS.

The wonderful little town of Blue Ridge, situated in a plateau on the very mountain top in the lower Blue Ridge range, is typical of the many splendid summer resort spots along the route. A cool mountain breeze sweeps up and down its streets practically all the time. A summer chalet located here has been the first step toward drawing visitors to the town, but with the opening up of the Blue Ridge highway the way will be paved for thousands of tourists and visitors who will linger at this beautiful spot of nature at vacation time. Just halfway between Blue Ridge and Ellijay is a little place that has already gained a reputation and drawn a limited number of summer visitors for many years. It is known as White Path, and three different kinds of mineral springs bubble forth from the ground at this place. With a broad highway leading tourists through this section, White Path would become famous over the country for its medicinal waters and its splendid climate.

But besides the scenery and the climate there are many other things to attract visitors to this glorious section of north Georgia. Among these are the many mines of various nature—principally gold, copper and marble—that are dotted through the section.

A MILLION IN GOLD NUGGETS.

In Gilmer county alone are two old mines that have yielded over a million dollars' worth of gold nuggets. The famous White Path mine is the most noted of these, while the Carleay gold mine, near Ellijay, has also turned out from $200,000 to $300,000 worth of gold. The soil of Gilmer and surrounding counties is declared to contain many undeveloped strata of gold, and the natives often pick up nuggets containing gold in the vicinity of these strata.

BRIDGES, FENCES AND ROADS OF MARBLE ARE FREQUENT SIGHTS IN THIS COUNTRY.

In fact, the waste marble that is thrown away would go a long way toward paving the entire route of the Blue Ridge highway. It may indeed be a reality some day that autos will roll over roads of marble through this scenic land. Bridges, fences and roadbeds of marble are frequent sights in this country. stood on the railroad tracks awaiting shipment. Its products are varied, probably more than in any other part of the south, everything necessary for the life of the people being raised in some form in the section. It is a section capable of even greater development agriculturally than has yet been dreamed.

ORDINARY WEBB AT WORK IN CHEROKEE.

As a final proof as to what can actually be accomplished, the work of Judge William J. Webb, the ordinary of Cherokee county, is pointed to with pride by the people of the section. Judge Webb has taken upon his shoulders the arduous work of superintending the road building, in addition to his regular duties as ordinary. A force of from forty to sixty convicts is kept busy upon the road, practically all the time, and this has been true ever since the abolishment of the convict lease system four years ago. Cherokee county, in addition to using her allotment of 37 convicts, is, in fact, paying extra money out of her tax receipts to secure the convicts which Pickens, her next door neighbor, is turning down.

Hillside are being cut and road bottoms filled all along the route in Cherokee, and Judge Webb himself superintends the work and makes out the improvements. The convicts are maintained at a cost of less than 50 cents a day per man. Cherokee county is so enthusiastic over the cause of good roads, however, that she is taxing herself for a fund of over $25,000 a year for the maintenance of convicts, salaries of officials and equipment for road building. This is an example of what enthusiasm will do for the development of a county, and it is already returning a hundred-fold to Cherokee. By just this constructive spirit of development the entire Blue Ridge highway will eventually be built, and when it is finally across north Georgia will come into her just deserts as the favorite summer resort country of the south.

Dr. E. W. Watkins, of Ellijay (on the left) who is one of the "big boosters" of the highway; and Judge William J. Webb, of Canton (on the right), who, as ordinary of Cherokee county, has done more than any other one man toward the accomplishment of the highway by the actual construction of good roads through his county. In the lower picture is shown a group of convicts at work on the highway near Canton.

Beautiful "Blue Ridge Highway" to Pierce Mountain Section; Autos May Roll Thro' Scenic Land on Roads of White Marble

By J. WALTER LEGRAND.

In the Blue Ridge mountains of north Georgia is a land of wondrous scenic beauty—long hidden from travel, because there have been no good roads leading through it. Soon, however, this country is to be opened to the tourists of the world by the construction of a great mountain highway through Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties. If—and it is all in the if—Pickens and Gilmer and Fannin counties will but do their part!

Here is a section holding untold possibilities as a mecca for summer resort seekers. Rolling hills stand out in grandeur against the cloud-flecked sky. The valleys are dotted with pretty green farms. Out of the hillsides flow mineral springs of rich medicinal value. No finer scenery is even anywhere in the world! It is indeed a section that should become world-famous for tourist travel.

And yet, because its hills are steep and its roads rough, and because no concerted effort has been made to overcome these obstacles and create good roads, the section has to this day remained inaccessible to the tourist.

Now at last, in the project of the Blue Ridge highway, the way is seen for opening up this land to travel. Piercing the mountain section with a splendid road, it will reveal to the tourists for the first time the virgin beauty of this hitherto untraveled country. After reaching northward 103 miles from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, Ga., a branch of the route, will go through Tennessee to Knoxville, while the main route will pass to the north, east into North Carolina.

OVER THE HILLS TO ATLANTA.

Over roads made of marble, from the many rich quarries of north Georgia, the highway will stretch onward to the mountains of western North Carolina. Over them it will pass through the "Sapphire Country" to Asheville, and thence to Washington and New York. This will be a splendid new route from the north to the south—over the hills to Atlanta. There will be no highway enterprise the south to rival for scenic grandeur.

The choicest route from New York clear to Jacksonville will then be this beautiful Blue Ridge highway. Thousands of tourists will be drawn to this particular route every year. The result will be a wonderful stimulus to the growth of these six north Georgia counties, from Fulton to Fannin, as well as advertising the wonders of Georgia to the world.

A splendid dream—is it not? "Dream, it is," answers the weakening chorus of those who have attempted to travel in its present ditched and rutted condition. This route so flatteringly pictured,

"And dream is all it ever shall be," adds the cynic. For it is a fact that when a group of "good roads boosters" traversed a few days ago the route from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, Ga., they were given the "bouncing of their lives." Suffice it to say that one of the party was thrown against the top of the car and suffered a nosebleed; and that more than once the machine went dead when a plunge through mountain streams brought water up to the engine. Everyone was bruised and sore from the trip. There are no good roads now in Pickens, Gilmer or Fannin counties.

COBB AND CHEROKEE WORKING CONVICTS.

But proof that this Blue Ridge highway is not "merely a dream" lies in the fact that the work is now actually under way in Cobb and Cherokee counties; and further, that the movement to start the work in the three upper counties is rapidly gaining strength and will probably soon crystallize in action.

Convicts are at work six days a week upon the route of this highway through Cobb and Cherokee, Marietta and Canton, the county seats from which the work is directed, are hotbeds of enthusiasm. Many beautiful stretches of road and many fills and gradings testify to the splendid work already accomplished. Cobb's pro rata number of the state's convicts is 40, while Cherokee's share is 27. Both are using the limit of their allotment and clamoring for more.

Contrast with this situation in Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin. Not one of these three counties, strange to say, has taken advantage of the state law which allows a division of the convicts among the counties in proportion to their population, for use in building roads. Under this law Pickens would receive eight convicts, Gilmer nine and Fannin ten, the three together being almost as many as Cherokee's.

COUNTIES MAY COMBINE FOR HIGHWAY WORK.

The movement has now been suggested that these three counties get together on the cooperative plan of uniting and letting one county take the entire force of 27 convicts for a certain period, after which they will go to the next county, and then to the third. This is a plan that has been adopted by other counties of Georgia with great success, and it is being warmly advocated as an immediate step toward the accomplishment of the highway.

Plans for the project go further, however, and include a proposed special tax in these counties to finance road construction work. It is contended to be a fact that this great mountain highway is ever to be made, that the forty-second senatorial district, composed of these three counties of Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin, which stand in a perpendicular line upon the map of Georgia, in the center of the extreme northern part of the state. The route from Jacksonville will soon be carried as far north as the Pickens county line, when the work in Cobb and Cherokee is rounded into shape. North Carolina promises a splendid road to the state line to meet the highway when constructed in Fannin county. The people of Murphy, N. C., are enthusiastic and are at work upon their plans already.

These are a group of interesting views taken on a recent automobile trip over the route of the proposed Blue Ridge highway. The heavy black line in the map shows the route followed, though a detour is proposed by way of Roswell and another between Ellijay and Talking Rock. At the top are two strikingly beautiful landscape scenes near Ellijay, in Gilmer county. On the left the lower picture shows a stretch of excellent road in Cherokee county, while on the right an auto is shown climbing a hill in Pickens county, near Talking Rock, with a wide valley stretching out beyond. The small center picture shows the ruins of an old copper mine situated just beside the road two miles south of Canton, which was operated by Governor Joseph E. Brown before the war.

FEDERAL AID TALK RETARDS ROUTE.

Rumors have spread in north Georgia within the past few months that the federal government was going to appropriate funds for the proposed Blue Ridge highway. This began through the purchase by the government of a large forest reserve in Fannin and surrounding counties, amounting to nearly 200,000 acres. It was argued that the government should build a good road to this country in order to open up its own forest preserve to the travel of the nation.

Analysis of the situation shows, however, that the government is planning only to improve the roads eventually through the forest reservation. The highway from Fulton to Fannin will have to be constructed practically entirely by the counties themselves. At best the government will only extend its aid after the project is fully launched and all counties are at work on a cooperative plan for the construction of the highway. The policy of the government in aiding road construction has always been to help only those who help themselves.

ELLIJAY A BOOSTING MOUNTAIN TOWN.

No town along the whole route traversed by the highway in Georgia is probably so enthusiastic as Ellijay, the county seat of Gilmer. This pretty little mountain town is nestled in the very foothills of the Blue Ridge range. Eighty-seven miles from Atlanta, on the Louisville and Nashville route toward Knoxville, it is the first place of importance reached after the mountain section is entered.

It was here that a "booster because" was held on July 4, in the interest of the Blue Ridge highway. Enthusiasm for the project was given great impetus, and folks from along the proposed route gathered by the hundreds.

represents the forty-second district in the Georgia state senate, is one of the prime movers in the highway project. Dr. Watkins, who is an extensive land owner of Ellijay, is also one of its ardent boosters, while another is H. M. Ellington, editor of The Ellijay Courier. But there are many other boosters for the highway, not only in Ellijay, but all along the route. Pickens, Ga., the county seat of Pickens, has many enthusiasts, and so has Blue Ridge, Ga., the county seat of Fannin.

SPLENDID LAND FOR SUMMER RESORTS.

The wonderful little town of Blue Ridge, situated in a plateau on the very mountain top in the lower Blue Ridge range, is typical of the many splendid summer resort spots along the route. A cool mountain breeze sweeps up and down its streets practically all the time. A summer chalet located here has been the first step toward drawing visitors to the town, but with the opening up of the Blue Ridge highway the way will be paved for thousands of tourists and visitors who will linger at this beautiful spot of nature at vacation time.

Just halfway between Blue Ridge and Ellijay is a little place that has already gained a reputation and drawn a limited number of summer visitors for many years. It is known as White Path, and three different kinds of mineral springs bubble forth from the ground at this place. With a broad highway leading tourists through this section, White Path would become famous over the country for its medicinal waters and its splendid climate.

But besides the scenery and the climate there are many other things to attract visitors to this glorious section of north Georgia. Among these are the many mines of various nature—principally gold, copper and marble—that are dotted through the section.

A MILLION IN GOLD NUGGETS.

In Gilmer county alone are two old mines that have yielded over a million dollars' worth of gold nuggets. The famous White Path mine is the most noted of these, while the Carleag gold mine, near Ellijay, has also turned out from $200,000 to $300,000 worth of gold. The soil of Gilmer and surrounding counties is declared to contain many undeveloped strata of gold, and the natives often pick up nuggets containing gold in the vicinity of these strata.

The greatest commercial asset of the tier of counties north of Fulton, however, is the abundance of marble deposited here by nature. Large and prosperous mining projects are going on at Nelson and Tale, in Pickens county; at Holly Springs, in Cherokee, and at White Stone and Tloga, in Gilmer.

Bridges, fences and roadbeds of marble are frequent sights in this country. In fact, the waste marble that is thrown away would go a long way toward paving the entire route of the Blue Ridge highway. It may indeed be a reality some day that autos will roll over roads of marble through this scenic land.

No summary of the section's resources would be complete without a mention of the abundant farm products that are turned out by this prolific country. Corn grows over ten feet high in the rich bottoms. Chickens are raised in such abundance that at times two carloads of poultry have stood on the railroad tracks awaiting shipment. Its products are varied, probably more than in any other part of the south, everything necessary for the life of the people being raised in some form in the section. It is a section capable of even greater development agriculturally than has yet been dreamed.

ORDINARY WEBB AT WORK IN CHEROKEE.

As a final proof as to what can actually be accomplished, the work of Judge William J. Webb, the ordinary of Cherokee county, is pointed to with pride by the people of the section.

Judge Webb has taken upon his shoulders the arduous work of superintending the road building. and A. E. Ellis, III, of Milwaukee, in the finals of the Western Golf association tournament, played the links of the Homewood Country club today.

Ellis, one of the youngest players in the tournament, has the championship of Wisconsin to his credit, and took the lead in the Western Golf association as former Western Champion Charles Evans, Jr., and former National Champion, Harry Vardon, of Mineapolis, in the present tournament. He gained notice at the opening by making a 390-yard hole in one stroke.

Ellis, who is the youngest member of the steeadiest tournament players in the United States, played over his 100th hole in the Western Golf association, which was behind all the others.

Ellis and Evans went out at the twenty-third hole and drove, and Evans had far better of the drive, and the two players were separated by the flagstick with a splendid 200-yard putt. Ellis, however, was the first to get the green from a lead line in a clump

Bureaucratic "Millennium" Is Approaching in Europe

In the Future Bureaucrats Will Tell Men How They Must Work, Eat and Bring Up Their Children.

Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.
Berlin, July 24.—(Special.)—Approaching the millennium of the universal state, in which bureaucrats will do all things and direct all men, in future tutelage rules in the international communities will tell men how they must work, eat, dress and bring up their children. This is the result of the decay of nineteenth century individualism and of the prohibitory, restrictive and mandatory legislation which is now fashionable on European soil.

No one doubts that that is Europe's fate. Those who rejoice at the prospect agree with those who lament it. Dr. Delbrück, imperial minister of the interior, lately told the reichstag in reply to a complaint that too much legislation that the legislation would continue, because it is good and desirable. And Professor Ludwig Bernhard, teacher of political science at Berlin university, who finds state regulation a bad thing, says that it must continue. The very evils which have sprung up as a result of the universal state's excessive activity have no cure, he says, but the homogeneous one of the universal state. "Nothing," says another competent judge, Dr. Hans Driescher, will rid us of the plague except more of the plague, for the state will only begin to leave us alone when it has interfered so thoroughly that there is nothing more to interfere with.

Most Bureaucrats in the World
There is no place for any opposing movement. The reason of this is that Europe's two strongest political schools, which differ in nearly everything, happen to agree in one thing: that the state must regulate more and more. The two schools are the socialists, ruthless for the existing type of state, and the militant conservatives, who oppose all change in the state. These extreme parties quarrel over more things, one denies the monarchy; another holds the monarchy sacred; one denies militarism; another finds militarism the chief bulwark against anarchy; one denies the church; the other thinks that strong state churches are as necessary as the state's police forces and police. These violently opposed thinkers agree in one thing, that the state must regulate the community more and more. By the side of this essential agreement, differences in the conception of state constitutions are unimportant. The socialists want a more centralized state, with the proletariat on top, and the conservatives want a more decentralized state, with the bourgeoisie on top, but both hold the view that the state must regulate more and more.

The enemies of the universal state idea are plainly the point of agreement between these two schools. Prime Bureaucracy says that the liberal, enthusiastic socialists are really more dangerous than the czar, in that they want the state to meddle in men's private ac-

As the result of this initiative, Wagner has had the satisfaction of seeing the once supine, indifferent state invading more and more domains every year. But Wagner's demands have no limits. ATLANTA WHOLESALERS SEND OUT INVITATIONS

The Atlanta Wholesalers and Manufacturers association are very busy sending out big batches of invitations to the coming Southern Merchants convention. The time is now drawing near when these men will be in the city for the big old-breaking crowd.

Many of the leading firms send out their own invitations in addition to those sent by the Merchants Manufacturers association. The association has sent out about 25,000 so far. There have been many other firms sent out by the Atlanta Wholesalers and Manufacturers association. Among others, who have sent them out this week were the M. C. Kiser company, who mailed a list of about 2,000 John Silver & company sent out a similar number as did the Dougherty-Jones-Boring company, Ward-Taitt company, J. K. Orr shoe company, Tugwell company, All-Star Manufacturing company, the Hirschberg company, Gramling-Spitzer company, A. M. Johnson company, and many others.

The association set the figure of 4,000 as the number they expected to come to the convention. Indications now are that there will be many more than this number here. Acceptance is coming in upon Secretary Harry T. Moore and the number who will doubtless come without advising the association in advance is bound to be large. Everything points to this being the biggest and best convention Atlanta has ever had. Everything is ready for the entertainment of the visitors and that they will have a good and time is assured. Atlanta is always ready in her heart and when the occasion is here, she is always ready to give the business men of the city there is something more than a good time in the air. The records which are being broken in the city are going to be broken this time as the attention of the city is all turned to the guests, as well as the beneficial time to all concerned.

"YEP, THEY'RE COMING!"

Impressionistic Picture of Secretary Harry T. Moore's office when the replies were coming in last week.

Permanent Exhibit Under Way—Location Settled

The Chamber of Commerce has now completed their plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods and the only thing left to do is for the manufacturers to come forward and subscribe for the space and the material arrangements of the building.

The exhibit will be housed in the four top floors of the new Chamber of Commerce building at the corner of Ashburn avenue and North Pryor street. This one of the most prominent corners in the city and should make a dandy location. It is within easy reach of all the hotels, the depots and the center of the city and will doubtless attract many visitors who would not see the place if it were further out from the center of the city.

The space which will be used for the exhibit totals between 18,000 and 20,000 square feet. The probability is that this will prove to be too little rather than too much. Many manufacturers have already subscribed and a large proportion of the space is already taken up. This, of course, means a case of "first come first served" and manufacturers who desire space had better send in their applications as soon as possible so that they will not be disappointed. The different exhibits will be arranged with related lines together as much as possible and in this way good order will be assured. There will be no danger of an effect of general mixture and when a man is interested in one style of merchandise he will be able to see all the different lines that form of business which are manufactured here without hunting all over the building for them. This exhibit is the result of much hard work for several years and the fact that it is now definitely arranged is due to the hard work which has been done by many individuals. The committee of the Chamber of Commerce who have had charge of the selection of the site are to be congratulated on their happy choice. This committee was composed of J. K. Orr, V. H. Krieshauser, M. M. Davies, J. T. Reese and W. H. White, Jr.

Courting a la Overland in the Philippines

When I was in Atlanta a little more than ten years ago," said Mr. Ludwig, "I was a newspaper man, and you see today, and an auto row, and that wasn't even the best of it. There you have auto row today, then some of the city's most beautiful homes fraced both sides of Peachtree street."

Mr. Ludwig is very enthusiastic over the plans for the new hotel, looking forward for a large business for the new 1914 Velle cars. He expects shipments to start in 1914 and to continue about the first or middle of September.

Lorenzen to Tigers.

Ottumwa, Iowa, July 26.—Pitcher Lorenzen, a left-hander of the Ottumwa club, in the Detroit American League, has been traded to the Tigers for $2,500.

Bull-Ship's so fearful. I wonder if she's in love?

Head-Probably, and very likely she's the head of the family.

Barman.

Courting a the Overland in the Philippines. An Overland model 66-T on one of the excellent highways near Manila.

The people of the Philippines have been clamoring for a motor vehicle ever since the United States introduced the control of the islands from Spain in 1898 and undertook the task of preparing the inhabitants for self-government. Habits and customs that dated back for centuries have been changed, and the people's desire for a life of living has undergone a transformation. Children who formerly received their education from the jungles now are learning in modern American schools. The introduction of the automobile has changed the lives of the Filipinos in the old days when a young Filipino desired to obtain the object of his affection by riding a horse to the altar of appeal to women of the world around, be they white, black, brown, red or yellow, he made use of the means at hand. When he was riding his lady love it was a very rude two-wheeled cart drawn by a stolid bullock. Today the heart aches all at the wheel of a big Overland motor car, his sweet leather cushion at his left. A photograph of a young Filipino in an Overland company, of Toledo, from Waterbury, Conn., is shown in Manila. Manila dealers in Overland, shows a young Filipino, his sweetheart and two other young women on a Linton highway.

There is an interesting demonstration of the startling contrast between the old and the new brought about. In the foreground is a young Filipino in a motor car, an enter transportation facilities. In the background is shown the stony bare hills with huts with thatched roofs, exactly the same in material and architecture as those built hundreds of years ago.

The picture is not an uncommon one to residents of the Philippines or to Americans who have never visited the islands. The picture of the Toledo company has been shipped to the Philippines and the Philippine Overland has jumped into favor to such an extent that even the self-proclaimed "hitters" of the interior provinces who are still fighting the United States flag, are beginning to use the word "Overland" to mean strangers to the motor car. The word "Overland" in the Philippines now means as numerous as bullocks and is rapidly becoming the popular pleasure vehicle of the whole country.

Mr. Mertz spent several days at the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company in view of the fact that the Paige line and in speaking of his selection of the Paige line.

"I have been approached during the past month by a number of automobile dealers, propositions have been made to me that would sound very profitable, but I have refused all of these offers because I am not a dealer and I am not available."

"In placing my order for a Paige '36 I have every confidence in believing that I have made the best possible purchase in the line of a popular priced car."

The value of the motor truck for the purposes of business promotion is a fact which is well known to all and some firms which find it worth while to advertise in the trade, the improvement in the service to their customers through the replacement of trucks.

"I am living now in Cincinnati the X H. Fruek. Lumber company installed a motor truck for the purpose of de-

Mr. Elsiey, the dealer to mark all the highways leading into his line of business, is a dealer in the other sundry is thus directed right to the dealer's door.

F. L. Elsiey, secretary of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, is the official manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company and he has been in close communication with the latter company on the subject of the motor truck.

Mr. Elsiey has been suffering from rheumatism, which has confined him to his bed for more than a month and according to advice from his doctors will not be able to attend to his duties for some time.

Mr. Elsiey has been secretary of the Automobile and Accessory association for many years and has always been a very enthusiastic promoter of the motor truck. The news of his distressing illness was a great disappointment to all who hope that he will be on his way soon.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH WILL ASK $10,000 MORE

Wants Additional Funds to Manufacture Free Typhoid Vaccine.

Having failed in the house to secure an appropriation bill for the health department, to be used for the manufacture and free distribution of typhoid vaccine, the state board of health has not given up its fight, but will appear before the senate committee on appropriations and ask that this increase be recommended.

The present appropriation for the health department is $28,000. The board wishes to devote the extra $10,000 to the employment of an extra man in the department whose exclusive duty it shall be to manufacture typhoid vaccine and to employ at least four physicians to act as assistants of the state and administer the vaccine free of charge.

This, believes Dr. N. P. Harris, head of the department, is one of the most important measures for the defense of the state that has ever been introduced in the Georgia legislature. He states that the cost of manufacturing typhoid vaccine averages 500 per cent. per dose, showing the enormous amount of typhoid in the state.

Vaccine Not Dangerous.

Dr. Harris states that the vaccine has been proven to be practically without any after effects which the popular mind has an exaggerated association with vaccines, and that it is not dangerous.

For its effectiveness, Dr. Harris cites the following figures upon the results of its use in the armies of the world:

4,123 British soldiers immunized in India during 1911. Typhoid incidence in the immunized 1.1 per thousand, in those not immunized 6.7 per thousand—a case reduction of 75 per cent.

Death-rate in immunized 0.15 per thousand, not immunized 1.47 per thousand—a mortality reduction of 85 per cent.

24,795 Japanese soldiers immunized in 1909. Comparison of typhoid incidence in immunized and non-immunized shows a case reduction of 75 per cent.

14,823 cases per thousand in immunized, 14,823 cases per thousand in non-immunized. A reduction in the typhoid rate among the immunized of 83 per cent.

39,000 persons immunized in Memphis, Tennessee, during the recent typhoid epidemic. 517 of these were children 1 to 5 years of age. The department of health reports says: "We believe from our experience that it is safe to say that from a most serious epidemic of typhoid fever."

2,944 persons immunized in Baltimore during 1911-12. Not a single case of typhoid fever occurred among these persons. In 309 hospital nurses and attendants immunized there were no cases of typhoid. Among 82 nurses and attendants not immunized there were 7 cases.

1,831 nurses and hospital attendants in Massachusetts hospitals were immunized. Only 3 cases of typhoid fever developed. Without immunization typhoid incidence was nine times greater.

Results of Army.

Dr. Harris cites the following telegram from the surgeon general of the United States army, as to the results of the use of the vaccine in our own army:

Washington, D. C., July 24.—The U. S. F. Harris, state health officer, Atlanta, Ga. Re: Typhoid vaccine. In army excellent. No case typhoid occurred in army since twenty-seven last. Strength, ninety thousand. Last year eighteen cases. Before vaccination, about one hundred and sixty cases yearly. Since vaccination, only six cases in vaccinated soldiers in nineteen-twelve. Since work started in nineteen-thirteen only one death from typhoid in about hundred and fifty thousand vaccinated soldiers.

GEO. H. TORNEY.

Surgeon General U. S. Army. The Georgia health department has the first in the union to make such an application to a state legislature, and Dr. Harris believes that it has set a precedent which others must follow.

TWO FARMERS IN DUEL

Rufus Clark and Bill Cox Shoot Out Differences.

Monterey, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Rufus Clark and Bill Cox, two prominent farmers, engaged in a pistol duel several miles west of here, and as a result both are possibly mortally wounded. Clark was shot four times, while Cox was wounded by three bullets.

The trouble was the culmination of bad feeling that has existed between the two men for some time. Both are alleged to have made threats against each other's life. The meeting occurred at Cox's store. Clark was in his buggy in the roadway. As soon as he approached the store the shooting began. Private Cox shot Clark in the chest three times. Clark then fired at Cox.

It is reported that during the three years confinement he has engaged in interesting many "fans" who have with him been in contact and has attempted a novel of underworld life.

DAVID LAMAR SILENT ABOUT HIS INDICTMENT

WASHINGTON, July 26.—David Lamar, the well of Wall street, who is under indictment in New York on two counts for impersonating public officials, refused today to take the indictment seriously and intimated that he had no immediate intention of returning to New York.

Mrs. Lamar said he was so extremely "busy" here that he could not afford to leave at the present time. With his counsel, Henry E. Davis, he is awaiting copies of the true bills found against him by the federal grand jury before making his plans.

Lamar admitted before the senate "goose" investigating committee that he had impersonated Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, Speaker Clark and other well-known public men in telephone conversations with Wall street rivals in an effort to advance his own schemes.

HARDWICK MAY PLACE CANDIDATE IN RACE

Friends Say Will Not Run Himself, But Will Undertake to Name Successor.

Although Congressman T. W. Hardwick, of the tenth, stated in a recent interview that he had authorized no statement to the effect that he would not be in the race to succeed himself, his friends here persist in the statement that he has decided not to run again, but that he will retire and devote himself to the practice of law, probably leaving in Atlanta.

This report has been persistent for some weeks and it is at least not unworthy that Congressman Hardwick should assert that he would or that he would not run, but merely that he had given no authority for the statement which his friends have circulated as political gossip.

Now comes the further report that in retelling he will not, for the present at least, drop political activity in the tenth, but will use his influence in the naming of his successor. In fact political gossip has it that the real reason why Congressman Hardwick has not "authorized" the statement that he would retire at the end of his present term is his desire to secure the greatest assistance possible to the candidate in the tenth whom he desires to support and that his announcement of retirement will not come until that candidate is actively engaged in the race.

It is not unusual if he has decided to retire, that Congressman Hardwick should desire to give the district represented by one of his personal and political friends and it is altogether probable that at least two of these, and possibly others, have already been approached with a view to ascertaining whether they are willing to make the race with Congressman Hardwick backing. The fact that negotiations in this direction have been going on for some time among the politicians from the tenth who have been here, with the Congressmen Hardwick, is not surprising.

ALBERT KEEN FURNISHES HORSES WATERING PLACE

During the hot days this summer the dumb brutes of Atlanta have suffered much through lack of public watering or watering places for animals.

On the corner of Peachtree and Peachtree street, Albert Keen, manager of the Georgian Terrace hotel, has established a drinking place for horses and mules during the hot days. He has given the services of his men to keep buckets filled, and last week dozens of poor over-worked brutes got not only fresh water to drink, but had their heads well sponged.

1914 CADILLAC IS AROUSING INTEREST

HAS TWO-SPEED DIRECT DRIVE AXLE.

New Mechanical Element Has Started Discussion and Comment—Distinct Step Forward Amazes Autoists.

Motorists, mindful of the Cadillac achievements in the development of the automobile, and therefore accustomed to look to that car each year for new and progressive features, are reading with avidity the 1914 announcement just issued, which at last reveals the nature of the latest model. In view of past Cadillac accomplishments, which included the introduction of the first practical electric cranking device, and the regulation of the forward method of pumping the engine into activity by means of hand labor, the keenest curiosity was aroused as to what the new mechanical element would be.

That curiosity has been answered by the announcement that the 1914 Cadillac will be endowed with a two-speed direct drive axle. While curiosity has been somewhat satisfied, the new mechanical element has started a buzzing of discussion and comment, because the device will have a revolutionary effect on the results attained in luxury, flexibility and safety. Executives of the Cadillac are already assured by little or no outward sign of visitors that no other forward step ever taken has created such a profound impression or aroused more widespread interest.

Most Appreciated by Mechanics. The methods by which the 1914 Cadillac two-speed direct drive axle secures increased luxury, efficiency and economy are so simple and so easily grasped by the mechanic, that the man who is thoroughly versed in automobile mechanics, some idea, however, may be given this revolutionary feature in more or less non-technical language.

It is not merely an axle that this mechanism is a great advance in motor car construction. Its peculiar function is of another nature. It provides for the power of the engine has been transmitted to the rear axle by a single bevel pinion and a single bevel driving gear. Therefore there could be at all times, and under all the various conditions of travel which might arise, only one ratio between the revolutions of the engine and the revolutions of the power, except for the transmission gears by the low direct gear, however, by means of the new axle, the Cadillac will have a direct gear ratio in transmitting the power to the rear wheels.

Usually the single direct gear ratio ranges from 2.5 to 1 down to 14 to 1, according to the axle and according to the success of the mechanical designer in securing that ratio best adapted to his particular car. That single ratio had to do the best it could under all circumstances. Now, with two ratios, the Cadillac has the means for promoting the economical and efficient operation of the power developed by the engine to the driving of the car.

Electric Switch Changes. On the 1914 Cadillac the low direct gear ratio is 3.6 to 1; the high direct gear ratio is 2.5 to 1. The low is especially adapted for city driving where traffic problems are met, where speed must be sacrificed to safety and starts frequent. A simple convenient electric switch changes the gear ratio from the low direct to the high direct and the car is ready for conditions which permit a speed rate of 18 miles per hour or more.

With the high direct gear ratio in operation at any given speed of the engine the speed of the car is increased about 42 per cent over what it would be with the low direct gear ratio. This point is illustrated that at an engine speed of 100 revolutions per minute with the low direct gear, the car speed is 12 miles per hour, while with the high direct gear will increase the speed to thirty miles per hour without any increase in engine speed.

One of the prime benefits claimed is lower fuel consumption because of the fact just stated and because the fuel is used to greater advantage. Other advantages include less friction in high gear by reason of the parts moving more freely, less wear and almost the entire elimination of vibration. There is also greatly increased comfort due to a luxurious smoothness of operation, yet these desirable results are obtained without complicating the engine.

There are several other features of the 1914 Cadillac that are attracting much attention, an improved and simplified Cadillac twin electrical automatic cranking, lighting and ignition system; a more efficient carburetor, stunning body designs and many refinements of detail.

Sheriff Stops Fight.

Pea-Nut, Ohio, July 26.—The scheduled fight round bout between Kid Julian of Syracuse, N. Y., and Cal Davies of Cleveland, featherweights, was stopped two minutes before the close of the first round this afternoon by Sheriff Wolfe of Ottawa county. Davies had a shade the better of the fight.

FIRESTONE CO. ENLARGES ITS GREAT TIRE PLANT

Fifty tons of finished tires, representing the daily output of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, have been found insufficient to supply the demand for this product so the directors prepared to increase the manufacturing facilities by the erection of new additions.

Work is now progressing on the new structures with every assurance that they will be ready by the fall, at which time the daily output will be doubled. The Firestone company at present has the largest exclusive tire plant in the world and with the added buildings should be enabled to keep ahead of its rapidly growing business.

The Firestone company only recently took possession of a new addition, but scarcely had the machinery been installed and the wheels put in operation than it was certain that still more manufacturing space was needed.

The history of the Firestone company dates back about fifteen years, at which time H. S. Firestone, president of the concern, selected Akron as the location for his then small business. He opened a plant at Miller and Swisher streets. The Firestone side-wire carriage tire was the chief product of the new but aggressive company. The business under the guidance of Mr. Firestone grew rapidly until more room was needed to handle the product.

The factory was enlarged. "Now," said Mr. Firestone, "this building will take care of us for a long time."

But space in the new, big structure was soon at a premium, crowded to capacity with new departments caused by growing needs. It was found compulsory to erect the gigantic factory on South Main street. Already general additions have been annexed to this plant and more will follow as the business warrants. The first plant, large and complete, is now used exclusively for the manufacture of Firestone tires.

The Firestone plant covers 15 acres and gives employment to more than 2,000 persons. It was designed and constructed with the idea of providing light and sanitation as well as safety against fire. In fact it embodies every comfort and convenience that tends to a happy environment for the employees.

The new addition now under way will be completed about the time President Firestone returns from Europe. He left recently for an automobile tour on the continent with his family. He plans to motor through France, Germany, Italy and possibly Greece.

ECONOMIC FACTOR IN PRESENT DAY BUSINESS

A. M. Dodd, Special Representative of the United States Tire Co., Discusses Motor Trucks.

That the motor truck has conclusively proven itself an indispensable and economic factor in modern business, is evidence by the great numbers of them seen daily on our streets and almost daily on our highways.

The industry, as far as possibilities are concerned, is as yet in its infancy, yet the growth has been tremendous. Big business was the first to realize the economic value of the truck, but as each line of business woke up to the realization of the fact that the truck was not only a time, but a money saver, the truck concern were ready with vehicles to meet the demand. There is no line of business at the present time whose demand for a motor driven delivery vehicle cannot be filled. From the heartiest, duty truck designed to haul steel beams, coal, ice, etc., down to the light delivery wagon of 500 pounds capacity for florists, laundries, etc.

Save More Business Men.

No business man of course is going to buy a truck unless it can be demonstrated to him that it will save him money, and be an improvement over his present system of delivery. Yet so carefully has the matter of motor truck delivery been studied by the manufacturers, that the representative of the truck manufacturers are in position to thoroughly analyze the delivery system of any business and can prove by figures and a preparation of evidence the greater efficiency and economy of motor truck delivery over horse or mule delivery.

A motor truck to deliver the utmost in service is called upon to run hour after hour, day in and day out with capacity load with few stops for repairs and with operating cost and up-keep expense kept at the lowest point. Simultaneous with the rapid growth of the truck industry has been the demand for a solid rubber tire, built to give the greatest mileage and with features which make for ease of replacement. In the early days of the industry the truck manufacturer's first task to sending his wheels to the nearest service station for the application of new tires. He was not in a position to apply them himself as he was of a complicated nature and special machinery was required in order to properly apply the tire.

Eliminating Time Wasters.

Realizing the necessity of eliminating this time-waster, the United States Tire company looked over the tire situation, and set its engineers to work to perfect a tire built along the lines of greatest simplicity, both as to construction and ease of application. The result is the United States Solid Demountable Tire. This tire is what is known as steel band construction. To an endless circular steel band of anywhere from 2 1/2 to 7 inches in width, and of varying diameters from 18 inches to 48 inches is vulcanized a hard rubber base which when cured, becomes almost as tough as the steel itself. To this is vulcanized the tread, making a solid rubber tire inseparably united into one unit. Years of experience has taught us the proper composition to give the greatest resiliency under varying conditions, with the result that we can supply a tire built to carry any weight, and yet have sufficient spring to minimize jar and vibration on the mechanism of the truck.

Bear in mind that solid rubber tires are not new. Prior to the road carried they have remarkable resiliency. They are over a hard blow will sometimes cause an over-inflation, stretching the rubber beyond its greatest stretching point, causing separation and almost inevitable destruction of the tire. An overload is destructive to both truck and tire. Load your truck up to its rated capacity only and it will last longer and require fewer repairs and the tire will surprise you with the mileage delivered. The motor truck is an economical method of delivery, in basic.

TEN GIANTS GOING ON THE WORLD TOUR

St. Louis, July 26.—Ten members of the New York National league yesterday have agreed to go on the trip around the world with the Chicago Americans next fall. On the train coming west the players took a vote to determine how many were willing to make the tour.

Those who voted to go are Mathewson, Demaree, Fromme, Wilcox, Hartley, Markle, Doyle, McCormick, Grant and Burns.

Cadillac leadership in scientific motor car development is once more strikingly demonstrated

A new element of efficiency
A new quality of luxury
A new source of economy

Each year you have looked to the Cadillac for the real and substantial progress in motor car development.

You have looked to the Cadillac for the great essentials in the practical motor car.

And you have not looked in vain.

Now conceive, if you can, a Cadillac with its essential functions sharpened, accentuated and refined.

Conceive such a process of refinement culminating in an entirely new riding quality of unexampled ease.

That is precisely what has come to pass in this new car.

The principal contributing factor—the two-speed direct drive axle—is described in detail elsewhere.

The Cadillac Delco electrical system of automatic cranking, lighting and ignition, the first practical system ever made and first introduced by us, has, after experience with it on 27,000 Cadillacs, been still further developed, improved and simplified and the slight attention required from the user materially reduced.

The carburetor has been improved, its efficiency and its well-known economy increased. It is hot water jacketed and electrically heated to facilitate starting in cold weather.

The rear springs are six inches longer.

The body designs are new and strikingly handsome.

Front seat passengers may enter or leave the car at either side.

These and many other refinements of essential details make for a greater and a better Cadillac and serve to more firmly establish its position as America's leading motor car.

The Cadillac Company has never disappointed you in the small-particular or in a single promise.

We promise you again, in this new car, a positive revelation in motor car luxury.

Cadillac two-speed direct drive axle

In attaining these much desired qualities, instead of adding complications to the power plant which make for greater fuel consumption and for greater upkeep expense, they have been attained by methods which are strikingly the reverse, viz., by methods which lessen the fuel consumption, methods which decrease friction with its resulting wear and methods which make for longer life, together with an appreciable decrease in the cost of operation and maintenance.

In this new axle the Cadillac Company once more gives evidence of its leadership in motor car development and motor car progress.

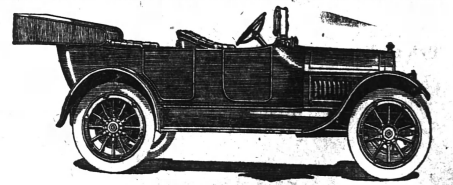

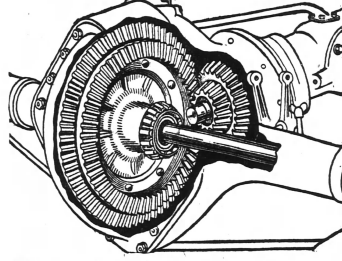

The advantages of this axle do not lie in its being particularly an improvement so far as its functions as an axle are concerned, but rather in the manifold advantages attained in other directions through the medium of the axle mechanism.

In place of the single bevel pinion and single bevel driving gear common to ordinary construction, there are two bevel pinions and two bevel driving gears. This affords two different gear ratios, each driving direct from the engine to the axle without intermediate gearing.

The usual single direct gear ratio is 3.6 to 1 down to 14 to 1 according to the car. Any single gear ratio is necessarily just right for all speeds and for all conditions. But by using two direct gear ratios we have nearly doubled the means for promoting the economical and efficient application of power developed by the engine to the driving of the car.

The change from one gear ratio to the other is made by a simple, convenient electric switch. The advantages of the high direct gear ratio lie primarily in the fact that with it, any given speed of the engine produces an increase of about 42 per cent in the speed of the car. For example, at an engine speed of 100 revolutions per minute, with the low direct gear engaged, the car will travel approximately 21 miles per hour, while on the high direct gear it will travel approximately 30 miles per hour with no increase in engine speed. This great increase in speed with engine speed accomplished through a number of desirable things. Among these is a decrease in axle-line consumption for a given mileage. This is due to the fact that with the higher turning speed, the engine produces a given quantity of gas is utilized to greater advantage and generates more actual power than with the engine turning over more slowly. Friction also is materially reduced by reason of the parts operating more slowly and this, too, is a factor in reducing axle-line consumption when driving on the high gear.

Another great advantage is that with this direct drive high gear ratio, there is obtained an extraordinarily luxurious smoothness in running, together with a marked quietness and a comparative freedom from vibration which to a greater or less extent, is ever present when traveling at high speed with a low gear ratio.

Children, Fathers and Mothers Clash in This Neighborhood Row

When Mrs. J. B. Smith, who lives in Battle Hill, was arrested for disorderly conduct, a row broke out between her and her husband, who was also arrested.

Both families came upon the scene in a clash of words, which eventually attracted the attention of the police. The row was caused by the fact that the Smiths and the Joneses had been fighting for some time. The Smiths were arrested for disorderly conduct, and the Joneses were arrested for disorderly conduct.

The trouble arose Saturday afternoon when Mrs. J. B. Smith, who lives in Battle Hill, was arrested for disorderly conduct. She was arrested by the police for disorderly conduct. Her husband, J. B. "TAX-DODGERS" AFFECTS SUMTER COUNTY TO BID FOR EXPERIMENT FARM

Decrease of About $50,000 Over 1912 Shown by Receiver's Report.

Washington, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—When tax receiver J. T. Harris of Sumter county, completed last week the compilation of interesting figures embodied in the 1913 tax digest of Wilkes county, it was announced that Wilkes county would show a decrease of about $50,000 over the figures of 1912.

The announcement in itself, carried little surprise when first made for it was reasoned that a slump in Wilkes county values was due for the following good and sufficient cause. First, the past two years have been hard years for farmers of this section. A small yield of farm products combined with low prices for the same, and the result was a loss of money matters had so depressed the price of standard stocks and bonds that citizens having surplus cash reserve in the banks which had invested this idle money in non-assessable stocks and bonds, third, Wilkes county had the past two years suffered from several large fires which would certainly have a large effect upon the tax returns reported to Mr. Harris.

But it has developed that none of the above causes are sufficient to account for a decrease in Wilkes county's taxable values for 1913. The real cause lies in a subtle malady which has spread rapidly over the whole county of Wilkes, and is known as "tax-dodging."

Figures show that the really holds Wilkes county return for taxation 24,294 acres of land with all buildings and improvements thereon at an average of $4.71 per acre, or a total aggregate value of $114,440. Negro tax payers return 25,648 acres of land with the improvements thereon at an average valuation of $4.88 per acre.

This indicates one or two things. Negroes are more honest than white neighbors in reporting their property for taxation, or the property owned by negroes in Wilkes county is more valuable than the property owned by the white people.

A conservative estimate of the value of Wilkes county's 200,000 acres of land is $20 per acre, or an average including the improvements on the farm lands of this section of the state this price would be given on forced sale.

FATHER KILLS CHILD; MULE KILLS OTHERS

Birmingham, Ala., July 26.—White George Hogg, a farmer, was cutting wood at his home near Pearl, Tuscaloosa county, Friday his six head feed of the hogs and struck his youngest child, an infant in the head, killing it instantly. The father picked up the body of the child and ran to his home nearby. There a neighbor met him and told him two of his young sons had been pawed to death in the field by an angry mule.

Mrs. A. E. Ingram, Perry.

SHE DIES IN 7 HOURS FROM BITE OF INSECT

Miss Drew Nunn Had Premonition of Death and Gave Funeral Directions.

Athens, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Miss Drew Nunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Nunn, living between Thursday evening by some unknown insect while in the garden. She died from the effects of the bite in seven hours.

In the garden she exclaimed: "Oh, something has bitten me." Search was made and there was no chance for the bite to have been made by a snake. She went into convulsions and died in great agony.

The strange feature of the case was that she seemed to have a premonition of her approaching death several days before the cause of her unusual demise occurred. Though robust and well, she declared several days before that she was afraid that she would soon die and she even went so far as to give minute directions as to the kind of coffin she wished to be buried in, the songs to sing at her funeral and the list of pallbearers.

No Waking for This Man

MANY PERQUISITES OF SPEAKER OF COMMONS

(Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.)
London, July 26.—There is one man in England who has the right, should his own carriage or auto happen to break down, to turn any other person out of his carriage or auto conveyance and take the latter place and that is the speaker of the house of commons. There are only two men in this country whose invitations to dinner constitute a command-to-dine which is to rank all sorts of palaces and penitentiaries of these being the king and the other the speaker of the house of commons.

The present holder of this office, the Right Hon. J. W. Lowther, is perhaps more in the public eye at the moment than any other man in England. His recent decision regarding the Liberal government's long-contested franchise bill having provided the winning of the parliamentary year is a result of it. This bill, which was designed to grant for the first time, almost universal male suffrage in this country, has been shelved indefinitely, and instead, a settlement of the women's suffrage question in England has been postponed for months and perhaps years. Probably at no time during his twenty years in the house of commons has the man called "Mr. Speaker" been so much in the public eye as he is at present. He is a stout, middle-aged man, with a white beard and a wig, presiding over the deliberations of the body, found himself so squarely in the limelight, and never, incidentally, has he stood so good a chance of being assassinated as he does at present at the hands of the infuriated women's long-marched plan he has spent at the moment. If he is not so strongly guarded, nowadays, when he leaves his official residence in the palace of Westminster, on his way to take his regular morning exercise in the "Row," then Scotland Yard is neglecting its duty. Meanwhile, the speaker has been attacked bitterly by George Bernard Shaw, who accuses him of "gross partiality."

Job Is No Soap.
Being speaker of the house of commons is no soap, however you look at it, but the rewards are many and varied, likewise a bit funny. The speaker, for instance, is the executive daily, for the first time, in the history of the world. "Mr. Speaker" takes precedence of the entire nobility in state processions, coming in for the first time, the archbishops who in their turn, are preceded only by royalty. At the end of the day, the speaker is the only member of the house who is not preceded by any one. He is usually with the king, and he draws a fat pension for the remainder of his life. His official salary is £2,500 a year, which he receives in the palace of Westminster. He is also entitled to use anything of being provided with a gorgeous state coach. The possession of the coach is a privilege, not a mixed blessing, the "speaker's coach" being an antiquated lumbering contraption which, if it is not broken down, will break down. Mr. Lowther, however, has not been so much in the public eye since it came into his possession, thereby enabling him to utilize his leisurely periods in the most comfortable manner. He has a private secretary and a private secretary, and the speaker's office is in the house of commons, not far from the palace of Westminster.

The "perquisites" mentioned above are only a few, however, of those enjoyed by the speaker. On being appointed to the chair, he receives an allowance of £2,000 a year, "equipment money," and he receives an allowance of £1,000 a year, "allowance of £1,000 a year." standing, harrowed his common sense would suggest, instead of dealing with other his own or somebody else's hat on, as is so commonly done in the rules of procedure. There are about a hundred more rules about the speaker's chair, and many of them are very curious. For example, the speaker is not allowed to wear a wig, but he is allowed to wear a wig.

Likewise, the speaker must make the house of commons, and he is not allowed to wear a wig, but he is allowed to wear a wig.

emerged from this ordeal more gracefully than a man of less tact and dignity would have done, but if he did not, "faster an ass," they say in England, all the time, he must take himself a lot more seriously than do most of us.

Gladsone once declared that no man in England (unless it were Henry Lauchlin) would have the courage to suggest doing away with the speaker's wig, but that was a good while ago, and there are a lot of folks today who would not lament the disappearance, not only of the speaker's wig, but of the speaker's wig.

UNIFORMS ARE COOL, SAYS CHIEF BEAVERS

Lighter Than That Worn in Any Previous Summer, He Declares.

Chief Beavers says that there is one class of workers at Atlanta who do not suffer from the intense heat of the past several days—members of the police force.

The uniform this season, he stated is lighter than that worn any previous summer, and although it looks warm and uncomfortable, it is decidedly light and airy.

This was in comment upon a letter received by the Constitution from Mrs. E. B. Smith. It follows in full: "The establishment of drinking fountains for horses and mules in the city is most humane, indeed, and it is hoped that they will be established before the summer is over. The police, however, as well as the patrolmen on regular beats, are suffering this hot weather as severely, or more so, than the dumb beasts on our streets."

"It is true that the policemen can drop into a fountain and get cooling water, but they are dressed in uniforms, buttoned from bottom to top of the high collar, gloried and belted and fastened to the waist and sweaters are worn throughout the day, no matter how hot."

"Our traffic men stand in the broiling sun through their long hours of duty, and in heavy uniforms. It is inhuman on the part of the police commissioners to demand this uniform, and inhuman on the part of Atlanta to permit them to wear it. There has only recently been a mail carrier in regulation uniform which is humane and sensible, the blue shirt waist, trousers and hat. Why can't such sensible uniforms be made for the police men?"

The straw helmet could, at least, be dropped and the wearing of the uniform coat for the blue shirt waist would wear down the heat and appearance in the least. His authority would not be less and his star would shine as brightly as ever. One thing is true: he would be a better officer, both mentally and physically.

When the humane move for the horses and mules of Atlanta extend to the human police men, they will be a better officer, both mentally and physically.

The "perquisites" mentioned above are only a few, however, of those enjoyed by the speaker. On being appointed to the chair, he receives an allowance of £2,000 a year, "equipment money," and he receives an allowance of £1,000 a year, "allowance of £1,000 a year." STORES BEING BURNED IN STRIKE DISTRICT

Calumet, Mich., July 26.—Morgan & Grierson's general store and market was burned tonight at Centennial, Mich., by a mob of strikers. The strikers asserted that the building was set on fire by sympathizers of the 15,000 miners who are on strike, because the proprietors today announced that hereafter no credit business would be done. A dwelling next to the store also was partly burned. Two companies of militia were dispatched to the scene of the fire.

The fire was the first destruction of property incident to the strike against the mine owners. The strikers' interests were not directly connected with the mine management. Bleeker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lammie, and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Young.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shanks left this week for Kentucky, where they will spend some time. Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hines, Miss Aylma Hines and Mr. A. H. Hines, Jr., are at Colorado Springs. Mrs. Mary B. The offer is even better than stated—some dresses, less expensive, in the lot were priced earlier at $27.50 to $35. But to make the headline broad and sweeping to include "ALL DRESSES," we had to stop at $23.50. Choose, therefore, from all lingerie dresses; all voile dresses; all crepe, ratine or linen dresses, whether the former price was $18.50, $20 or $23.50, at $9.85.

Reasons enough, then, for discontinuing handling this glove and closing out the stock on hand at 39c.

Glove is full 16-button length; full cut and finely finished. Pure black silk, firm, plump quality. Double tipped fingers. All sizes in black, white, tan, pongee, blue and lavender. (Gloves—Main Floor, Left.)

Up to $2.50 Undermuslins at

Especially noteworthy in the $2.50 garments is a small lot of thirteen fine nainsook gowns with entire bust of shadow lace. Beautifully ribbon-trimmed. RAINS EXPECTED ON TEXAS FIELDS

Low Barometer Prevailed in Southeast Texas and Selling of Cotton Brought on Decline—Spot Cotton Quiet.

New York, July 26.—It was the opinion in cotton market circles here today that by Monday the drought in the southwest, particularly in central and southeast Texas, would be thoroughly broken. A low barometer prevailed throughout the central west promoting showery conditions and the official forecast indicated unsettled weather over most of Texas and Oklahoma tomorrow. With this in mind, rural traders became heavy sellers of cotton, and after opening steady at a decline of 1 to 5 points, the market worked off constantly until at the close, which was steady at a net decline of 14 points, about the lowest level of the present downward movement, were reached.

The fact that most authorities agree that the Texas crop has not been damaged beyond repair, gave assurance that the expected rains, if heavy and general enough, would restore the threatened crop outlook in that state. A number of private advices received during the day were generally favorable, although calling attention to the need of rain in the southwest. General improvement in conditions over Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi during the past month was noted in the crop report, but it was pointed out that a prominent feature here was a crop condition which was not so good as it appeared. A southern river, the crop was somewhat better than last year, although several fears that the cotton covered by yesterday's report was not so good as it appeared. It was pointed out that the cotton covered by yesterday's report was not so good as it appeared. It was pointed out that the cotton covered by yesterday's report was not so good as it appeared.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 27, 1913

TWO SOUTHERN TRAINS IN COLLISION ON SIDING

Fireman Jones Has Rib Broken.
Engineer Jennings Injured.
Negro Porter Killed.

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—Southern passenger trains Nos. 13 (northbound) and No. 21 (southbound) had a head-on collision on a siding at Hilton, near Macon, this morning at 1:10 o'clock, resulting in the death of Will Jackson, the negro porter who opened the train, and injuring Engineer H. G. Jennings of Macon, and Fireman W. E. Jones of Atlanta, of the train No. 21.

When the train No. 21 was within 100 yards of the siding the porter became excited over the apprehension that he had not turned the switch properly. He turned it again, opening the siding to the approaching train. He was struck by the engine of train No. 21 and instantly killed.

Engineer Jennings sustained a bruised shoulder and a broken rib, and Fireman Jones had a rib broken. None of the passengers were hurt, although all were severely scared.

A delay of less than an hour was occasioned by the wreck, the 21 taking train No. 13 on to Atlanta, while the passengers from No. 21 were transferred and brought to Macon.

Just three minutes after the head-on collision on the Southern railway at Hilton this morning, a Georgia Southern and Florida No. 4 was wrecked while taking a siding to allow another train to pass at Dekatona, 15 miles south of Macon.

While making a curve the locomotive bogged and ran off the rails and a day coach followed, shaking up the passengers considerably, though none were seriously injured. Traffic was delayed five hours.

NEGRO SENTENCED TO GANG FOR WIFE'S ROW WITH NEIGHBOR

Mollie Jones, black and corpulent, who was ordered before Judge Charles Oliphant on a charge of disorderly conduct, was too sick to appear in police court yesterday morning. She sent her husband, George, as a proxy prisoner. He admitted before the judge an air of reservation, an apparent victim of her temper.

"The girl to answer for whatever that woman of mine happened to do," Judge Oliphant said. "You are the kumstaken as he is as possible please."

Missouri Stripes, the negro neighbor with whom Mollie had had the fight, testified that she had been beaten, preached anti-democracy, and that her assistant could not get punishment instead of death. Evidence tended to show that Mollie was the aggressor.

A fine of $10.75 was assessed upon both George and Missouri. George told the judge that, inasmuch as the wife had created such outlandish disturbance, he didn't blame her for lying in bed and sending a defendant by proxy.

He will serve eleven days in the stocks.

CHAS. OLIPHANT DROWNS

Found Dead After Search by Fellow-Campers.

Louisville, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—Charles Oliphant, a young Augustan, was drowned at Clark's mill pond late yesterday, where he was in company with a party from Macon. He was one of his camp fellows, were fishing and he decided to go a short distance below them and take a swim. He was a good swimmer, and the accident is hard to account for unless he struck something while diving.

Young Oliphant was a son of Dickson Oliphant, a prominent farmer near Wrens, Ga. He was a first honor graduate of Mercer university, class of 1912, and for the past year has been a student at the Augusta Medical college.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED

With Dress Ablaze Mrs. J. D.
Ridley Rushes Into Street.

Waycross, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—While preparing to dine Mrs. J. D. Ridley's clothing caught fire in some unexplained manner and the fire quickly spread to her dress, which she was wearing, and she rushed into the street screaming for help and neighbors. All the clothing was burned from her body, and physicians who hurried to aid her held out no hope for her recovery.

Mrs. Ridley rallied a short time after the accident, but was unable to tell how her dress caught fire. She was using an oil stove. Her husband and a 7-year-old son survive.

Mrs. Ridley's home was originally in Baldwin county, near Milledgeville, and she had recently returned from a visit to relatives.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow, and the remains taken to Caldwell for interment.

MOTION OF W. C. LANIER POSTPONED TO AUG. 16

Waycross, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—The motion of W. C. Lanier, under life sentence for the murder of John J. D. Ridley, for a new trial was not heard by Judge T. J. McRae today, as scheduled, but was postponed until August 16.

Since Lanier's conviction in superior court his wife, indicted jointly with him, was tried and acquitted.

Today fixed August 6 as the date for the preliminary trial of the state murder of the 19-year-old white man, held here as a suspect in the murder of John J. D. Ridley, a farmer at Milledgeville, and the Western, three weeks ago.

B. F. Turner, Benevolence.

MACON MAYOR TO ENTER CONGRESS RACE IN SIXTH

Friends of John T. Moore Have Already Raised a Campaign
Fund of Considerable Size.

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—The situation in the sixth congressional district as regards the race to succeed James C. L. Bartlett when his present term expires is growing more complicated. Today it was announced that Mayor John T. Moore, of Macon, will probably get in the race, his friends having already raised a campaign fund of considerable size with promise of more.

The mayor says he has under advisement and will announce his intention in due course of time. Under the law he cannot be a candidate to succeed himself as mayor.

This makes four possibilities in the congressional race, J. Walter Wise, of Fayetteville, and Colonel John C. Cooper, both opponents of Judge Bartlett, and it is said that Colonel John C. Folger is giving the question consideration.

WIFE TIES HER HUSBAND AND THEN SHOTS HIM

After Untying the Corpse, Mrs.
Rodriguez Stretches Self Beside It and Suicides.

Tampa, Fla., July 26.—First thing this morning in bed as he lay asleep, Mrs. Avelina Rodriguez, a comely young Cuban woman, shot her husband to death at their home in the eastern part of the city this morning. When she saw his life had fled she cut the bonds from his body, and stretching herself beside him, fired the remaining shot from the pistol into her own heart and was dead.

The pair lay side by side, and the slender ropes which still partly held Rodriguez's body to the bed and the pistol grasped in Mrs. Rodriguez's hand told the story.

She did not leave any note to explain her deed, but the police and the neighbors were able to piece out the story, which was one of abuse and knavery on the part of Rodriguez, who last night gave her the final beating of a series covering their year of married life.

Last week the woman had Rodriguez arrested on the charge of stealing money from her. Yesterday she cured his release on bond. Last night he beat her, and this morning's double tragedy was the sequel.

The new school proposition received the largest vote—141 for and 7 against. Tifton, Ga., July 26.—(Special).—Tift county wool growers sold their season's clip in Tifton today to J. N. Griffin, of Valdosta, for 21 cents a pound. There were eleven growers represented with over thirty bales, containing 5,000 pounds of wool.

The sheep men report wool light this year, owing to the dry winter and spring, averaging but a little over two pounds to the sheep. Last year the same growers sold 6,000 pounds at 25 cents a pound.

EVERYTHING VERBOTEN IS FORBIDDEN.

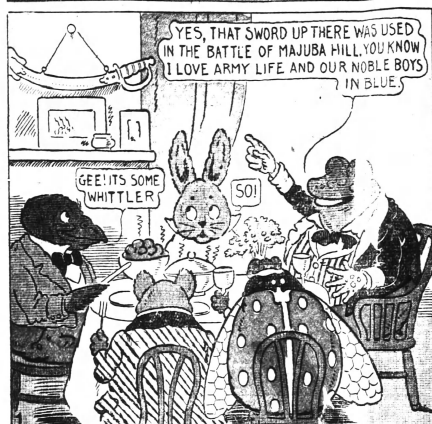

Cousin Sue - Hamburg

"What one must NOT Do, is 'verboten' and is the first thing to learn in Germany. Everybody wants to get you directions, but 'Deutsch', 'Sack', and 'Lurfee' didn't want any! There is no use to run away from trouble, if you are only to get in deeper and deeper, and with your clothes on too. I didn't but all the others got footed. Wishing you the same, Sammy."

On The Beach

HE frock on the figure standing to the left is of a grayish blue silk, made with the two flounces of chiffon on the skirt, which are very fashionable this season. The kimono blouse has a vest of white tulle, while tulle frills finish the elbow sleeves and are used for the upstanding collar. The girle is of a deep shade of blue silk. The hat is of white hemp, faced with grayish blue silk, and trimmed with white roses, while a bow of the same material as the girle is very becomingly placed under the rather flared brim in back.

The dress on the girl reclining in the chair is of gray voile, on which large red dots are embroidered. It is made very simply, black silk being used for the sash and the band edging the neck, while white silk is used for the ruffles around the neck and sleeves. The one mark of originality on this gown is shown in the sleeves, which are of plain gray voile, in contrast to the dotted voile.

A very picturesque hat is shown on the middle figure, being of coffee colored straw, made in a poke shape. Red roses encircle the crown, and black velvet streamers extend down below the waist line in back.

I HAVE always considered this one of the neatest of all patterns to embroider upon underwear. In the first place each design is so small that there need be no complex needlework. Each leaf can be covered with the satin-stitch which even a child can learn to make, since it is so over and over stitch, sometimes called a spool-winding, so smoothly are the threads wound over and over a figure from tip to base. Or, perhaps you prefer eyelet. That work is for professionals. I prefer eyelets in waists, but solid embroidery is necessary in garments needing the weekly laundry work.

Note in my diagram how to cut scallops for curves. Do not trim your scallops close to the edge, but between rows of scallops as you would cut insertion. Sincerely yours,

Winifred Worth

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN.

Put some soap in a pint of hot water, stir and remove soap. Saturate Design with moisture, then remove excess moisture by partially drying Design. Place material on a hard, flat surface and lay the Design, face down, upon the material. Cover with two folds of newspaper, and with a tablespoon rub, pressing hard, until the Design is entirely transferred.

PATENT PENDING.

ODDS AND ENDS

FOR cleaning linens try dry flour applied with newspaper.

TURNIPS are improved by adding one or two tablespoons of sugar when cooking.

VEIL, rolled each time it is taken off will keep neat much longer than when folded, gloves pulled out and smoothed will wear twice as long as if they were crushed and tossed into a drawer.

IF a rug is placed on the dining room floor or the floor is just varnished the pushing back of chairs will wear out the carpet or scratch the floor. It is best to purchase rubber tips and have them tacked to the chair legs. It will cost about $1 to get enough tips for a half-dozen chairs and the $1 will save many dollars in wear on the floor or rug.

"DRESSING" A DINING ROOM

BY MISS MAYNE.

PLACING dress as the first and most important medium to charm the world individually and collectively, I would say that the fittings and furnishings of her house afford a woman her second opportunity. The responsibility for the architecture of his home is usually accorded to the man, but on the woman falls the onus of a successful or unsuccessful, an effective or an ineffective interior.

Her house, we may say, stands as a background against which she shows her world. If it is refined, if its coloring is soft and harmonious and if it is unobtrusive by useless and superfluous decorations, she is correspondingly attractive to her friends. Assuming that the woman is aware of the fact, it often happens that she is uncertain what to do to attain this result, though she may covet it. It is my purpose in these articles to practically demonstrate the simplest ways in which it may be accomplished. The idea which obtains with many that money is the only necessary requisite for a beautiful house is a fallacy. The

BUSINESS GIRLS

BY ANNETTE ANGERT.

PROFESSIONAL women and business men have clubs, societies, little groups of friends, all tremendously interested in their work. Women who write like to talk to other literary people. A man smokes with another man and closes new deals or thinks up new ones.

A business girl has little time at her own disposal. She can't hunt up a congenial soul on the first sunny afternoon, take a walk on the bluffs by the lake, in the city, or she have a good talk and come back refreshed. She would love to, but she can't afford to.

She has her personal friends, but they are not often conversant with her conditions and work. Nevertheless, there are many times when she needs discussion of her work, a general clearing up of her mind and inspiration.

Aren't there a good many times when you are tired at night and no one knows just what is wrong? When you would like to talk about your troubles with some one who would understand? Perhaps, then, the next thing wouldn't be so hard.

I think that the "next step" in the direction of some sort of cooperation and helpfulness among business women is in the printed word.

Business is opening more and more widely to women. It is a strenuous life for even the girl who takes lightly. Perhaps you come from the country, where there was no chance to do the things you wanted to do; or maybe you are a city girl with a pleasant home, or a room in a boarding house. Your business problems are practically the same, but your background is different.

Sometimes we are so busy in business that we forget to remember the warm, sunlit hill that wound up the road between the trees, or the smell of the bread as your mother took it out of the oven, or the blaze of a cheerful wood fire on a winter night. The dear, homely things are what we forget and it is the memory of them that we need most when we work all day for our living.

Perhaps, if you will help, we can remember together. We can work out some of the little problems that perplex us as business women.

Figured goods are seldom as effective for window draperies as plain material, and a chintz dining room is an offense against good taste.

WILD FLOWERS

BY EDNA EGAN.

NOW is the time for lovers of the shy wild flowers to invade the haunts of Nature and bear away the lovely blossoms to make a wild garden. You can successfully transplant wild flowers if the proper soil awaits them. They must also be properly shaded, for these children of the woodland depths do not thrive in the sunlight.

The perfect location for a wild garden is a sunny, nook bordering a grove of trees, so that the garden will accommodate the flowers that require sunshine as well as those which thrive in the shade.

To prepare the soil for a wild garden, dig out the earth to a depth of one foot and spread over the bottom a layer of broken shells and saives or of clay to a depth of three inches. Over this place good soil and leaves and fill up the remaining space with rich leaf mold from the woods or forest.

should the soil be naturally heavy and rich, and several inches of leaf mold and allow stones to abound. The flower garden should be raised two inches above the surrounding soil. When the season for clearing up arrives, never remove the dead leaves. In the wild garden can be used such beautiful plants as bloodroot, lampion, violet, spring beauty, jack-in-the-pulpit, false Solomon's seal, columbine, honeysuckle, laurel, anemone, flag, rhododendron, queen's lace and other varieties.

Columbines belong to the wild garden rather than to the cultivated borders, where they are sometimes used. The yellowish red bells produce a beautiful effect when massed in one spot. One of the loveliest of the wild plants is the brilliant orange milkweed. This will grow and flower magnificently in rather dry, sterile soil, exposed to the sun. The large yellow poppies also thrive in almost any soil.

Some nurserymen sell packages of wild flower seeds which can be scattered in the wild garden, but afterward some of the seedlings will have to be transplanted.

Jack-in-the-pulpit will thrive in dry or damp soil where it is shady. Visit the woods as soon as the weather permits and dig up the plants before they are very high above the soil. In fact all the wild plants should be transferred to your garden while they are yet young. If you follow this direction, the plants will blossom in your garden the first year.

The shrubs, such as laurel, honeysuckle and rhododendron, should be transplanted to the wild garden the fall if you do not wish to retard their growth. All summer long you can have a wealth of bloom in the wild garden if you arrange it properly.

THE STAY-AT-HOME

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

I don't make the smallest difference whether the woman who stays at home all summer does it as a matter of choice or from reasons of economy she is going to take it out on her sister who spent the season out of town if it bespeaks her last breath.

It is therefore, with a mocking and incredulous smile that she listens to the rhapsodies of her who has accumulated a sufficient coat of 'tan to prove to the wayfarer that she has not languished in town all summer.

Really, I have never met such charming people in all my life," cries the enthusiast. "So cultivated, so literary! They didn't talk personalities as we do here at home. They talked ideas, and such ideas, my dear! Really, I am sorry you should have missed the opportunity of meeting them and getting outside of the narrow home rut."

"The Whooopems were there, I hear," remarks her listener with a little indignant smile curling the corners of her lips.

"Well, yes," admits the other reluctantly. "I am told they literally ran everything," pursues her tormentor, "and that their party was large and so excessively jolly that they took possession of the whole place, except the swept corners in which a few old tabbies gathered to pursue fancy work and discuss the latest novels. I suppose of course, you saw 'very little' of the Whooopems, as they are proverbially Philistine, and you confess to having had a literary summer."

It takes but a pin prick to collapse the gayest balloon.

"I've had the liveliest sort of season," says another to the friend of her bosom; "one charming entertainment after another until I am quite exhausted."

"You must be," I heard the girls had to tie handkerchiefs around their arms at the cotillions because there were not enough men to go round," is the sweetly sympathetic reply, followed by a vivid account of the attractions of one's own home as a summer resort.

Stunned, bewildered, the poor creature who has made it her duty to bear with the discomforts of her outdoor life, and conscientiously enjoy every moment of it, falls into the pit dug by the friend of her bosom. Her gay, bustling, beautiful, becomes limp and dragged, her pallor asserts itself, even under the veneer of tan, and subconsciously she sinks into second place beside the conqueror, who has not gone abroad to find new worlds, but has been content to stay at home and keep a keen eye on her own and others.

A FETCHING MOTIF

When the Kiddies are Dressed Up

EVERY normal little girl likes to "dress up" on gala occasions, even though she be a perfect tomboy at ordinary times; there are days when nothing is quite good enough or pretty enough for her attire. And every normal mother enjoys seeing her little daughter prettily and appropriately dressed.

On this page are a number of dainty and girlish fashions from which to select a party dress for the little maiden. All are developed in white fabrics. Softly flowing voile, India linen, Paris muslin, embroidered crepe and other materials of like nature are suited for these little frocks, while simple trimmings of fine embroidery, lace, or hand hemstitching and tucks are used for decoration.

White stockings of silk or lace thread, and white shoes in canvas, buckskin, soft kid, or for a very tiny girl, like the tot in the extreme right hand corner of the page, Irish lace are worn. The hair dressing for small girls should be simple; the locks caught loosely back with a big bow of ribbon, is a most becoming fashion to a youthful face. These illustrations are direct from Paris, the center of fashion, and are by Underwood & Underwood.
